A TROUBLED TSAR.

More Mines Laid on the Route to Livadia,

But Melikoff's Myrmidons Discover Them.

Terms of the Preliminary Treaty Between Chili and Peru.

Ninety-Six Soldiers Drowned in the Ebro—News from Turkey, Austria, Germany and India.

Russia.

LONDON, September 4.—A well informed St. Petersburg correspondent writes: A mine was discovered in the Government of Ekaterinoslav on Friday last, previous to the Emperor's journey from Tsarskoe to Livadia, and another in the Government of Taurida, 116 versts further on the railway to Simperapol was found, only the day before the Emperor started. The latter mine contained packed into cases. There was a wire connected with the mine, but no battery attached. General Louis Melikoff had been exercising the greatest vigilance in view of the Emperor's intended journey. The details about the mine in Taurida are from a competent source.

108 POUNDS OF DYNAMITE

England.

LONDON, September 4.—Gladstone will return to town and attend a Cabinet meeting to-day.

THE SCULLING REGATTA.

The sculling regatta will probably be fixed for the 22d of November.

THE WOOL SALES.

Yesterday's wool sales went off with spirit at fully previous rates and amounted to 10,300 bales, chiefly New South Wales, Victorian, New Zealand and Tasmanian.

THE WEAVERS.

The Oldham limited companies and private spinners have decided to issue circulars to test the feeling as to working only four days per week.

TWO COLLISIONS AT SEA.

The steamer Sumatra, Capt. Woods, which sailed from Boston, August 20, for London, while going up the channel yesterday came in collision off Wen's Light with the Dragon, from London for Surat. The Dragon sank immediately. Her crew were rescued and landed at Dover. The Sumatra was greatly damaged, but proceeded to London. The German bark Christel, Capt. Zink, from New York August 1, for Bremen, had a collision 800 miles south of Cape Clear with the iron ship Gartconnel, of Greenock, from Java, laden with sugar for Queenstown. The Gartconnel sank. Her crew were saved. The Christel is making for Falmouth.

THE AUSTRALIAN OARSMEN.

The Australians interested in the sculling matches have cabled a dispatch to the American firm which has offered $5,000 in prizes, stating that Trickett and Laycock will not row later than the 22nd of November and that if the race is rowed on the Thames it must be rowed in heats.

THE LORDS WINCING.

The treatment of various measures by the respective houses of the British Parliament is developing considerable feeling. It is claimed that the House of Lords is wincing under the severe criticism of Forster and Bright.

POLITICAL PROMOTIONS.

Lord Frederick Charles Cavendish, a member of the House of Commons for the West of Yorkshire and Financial Secretary of the Treasury, will probably succeed Right Hon. W. P. Adams as First Commissioner of Works, upon Mr. Adams' appointment to the Governorship of Madras. Mr. Leonard Henry Courtney, member for Liskerd, will succeed Lord Cavendish in his Secretaryship of the Treasury.

Austro-Hungary.

LONDON, September 4.—A dispatch from Norderncy announces that Baron Von Haymerle, the Austrian Minister of Foreign Affairs, has left that island for Fredericbsruhe, where, as previously reported, he will meet Prince Bismarck.

WITH BISMARCK.

A Vienna dispatch says Baron Von Haymerle will spend Saturday and Sunday with Prince Bismarck at Friedrichsohe.

South America.

LONDON, September 4.—The Daily Telegraph reports a preliminary treaty of peace has been signed at Lima and the following are its principal articles: "Peru surrenders the Nonito, Manco, Capac and Athualpa, razes the fortification of Callao, surrenders all the artillery of Callao, engages to not augment the navy for ten years and will reimburse Chili the cost of the war. Chili engages to pay half the exterior debt of Peru."

Central America.

PANAMA, August 25.—In Central America there seems to be less likelihood of war than at last advices, though matters are still unsettled.

Spain.

MADRID, Spetember 4.—The official report of the disaster on the Ebro states that the total number of men drowned was ninety-six. The lieutenant who laid the pontoon bride was among the lost.

Germany.

NEW YORK, September 4.—A Berlin dispatch says that the Imperial Bank of Germany advanced its rate from 5 1-2 to 6 per cent.

Turkey.

LONDON, September 4.—A correspondant at Constantinople says the Porte, although ready to cede Dulcigno, proposes to retain Matakash and Sinoschi.

THE MONTENEGRIN FRONTIER.

CONSTANTINOPLE, September 4.—The line of the Montenegrin frontier proposed by Turkey starts from the Gulf of Castrali, leaves Matakash to Turkey, thence binds westward, and after passing between Dikoschi and Podgoritza leaves Katchijajua to Montenegro. The Porte's reply concerning the Montenegrin question states that while surrendering Dulcigno it desires to avoid all plans of foreign intervention; consequently if the Powers thought proper to adopt measures tending to assist Montenegro to occupy Dulcigno by force the Porte would decline co-operation in these measures.

Cuba.

HAVANA, September 4.—The yellow fever has assumed an epidemic character in the village of San Diego del Valle, in the jurisdiction of Sagua, attacking even the Creoles and causing the death of forty persons within a few days. A sick soldier from Sagua, passing through the village, imported the fever. Twenty-eight deaths from yellow fever and one from small-pox occurred in Havana for the week ending Friday last.

Afghanistan.

LONDON, September 4.—Gen. Roberts telegraphs at six o'clock the evening of the 1st instant as follows: Ayoob Khan's army has been defeated and dispersed. The British loss is slight. In one regiment three officers and seven men were killed and three officers and eighteen men wounded. The cavalry are still pursuing the enemy. It is believed Ayoob Khan has fled to Herat.

AN EX-CONVICT.

Something About Michael Dunn and His Home for Ex-Criminals.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, September 4.—There is a home in Water street for ex-convicts where prayer and Bible-reading are the chief entertainments. The representations of the principal of this home, an ex-convict himself, caused the re-arrest of young Crever, who, to escape the horrors of the Elmira Reformatory, threw himself out of a third-story window of the prison, to which place he had been inveigled by the misrepresentation that he would be furnished work, and was killed. A reporter hunted up this keeper of the home for ex-convicts. His name is Michael Dunn. He spends the early part of the evening in preaching and psalm-singing in various missions in the vicinity. He wears while he speaks of poor sinners professing faith, but his lips curled defiantly and his eyes flashed when he spoke of what he would do with any criminal who played the hypocrite on him, emphasizing his remarks with a thump that made the table at which he sat rattle with terror. The rules of his home require every man to join in prayer every morning and evening and to read the Bible. If they neglect either of these, or use a big, big D, they are immediately expelled.

A SANCTIMONIOUS LOOK

DR. CHAPIN,

The Well-Known Universalist Divine, in Ill-Health.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, September 4.—The Rev. Dr. E. H. Chapin, who sailed for Europe on May 22, returned on August 7, since which time he has been confined to his house by ill-health. The trip, which was made in the hope of building up his health, has not apparently benefited him, as similar journeys had done before. He went directly to consult an eminent London physician, who recommended him to go to the Rigi in Switzerland, to get the benefit of the mountain air. Dr. Chapin, however, failed to recuperate, and suffered from home-sickness and loss of appetite. At the time when he left America he was troubled with a severe cough, caused, according to a German physician, by inflammation of the mucous membrane.

Since Dr. Chapin's return his cough has gradually left him, but he has become very weak, and reduced in flesh from a weight of 220 pounds to 1[illegible]0 pounds. His case has been examined by many eminent doctors both here and abroad, and all agree that there is no organic disease. No cause is assigned for the trouble, except overwork and the warm weather. Dr. Chapin suffers chiefly at present from loss of appetite, and his physicians, Drs. Flint and Wood, are directing their efforts mainly to its restoration. Dr. Chapin had expected to resume the pastorate of his church (the Fourth Universalist) in October, but his friends fear that he will not be able to undertake it [illegible] several weeks at least. Meantime, the church is looking for a minister to supply the pulpit temporarily.

A New York Fire.

NEW YORK, September 4.—At 7:10 o'clock last night a fire occurred in Hague street. After an hour's hard work the fire was extinguished and all danger has passed. The damage done by fire and water to the buildings and stocks is estimated at about $110,[illegible] as follows: Schultz, Southwick & Co.'s stock, $40,000; building, $5,000; Edmund Chewtan, $15,000; Sam'l. Roberts, $10,000; the A. B. Taylor Printing Press Company, $10,000; Walter Wooley, $5,000; Chas. [illegible] Colton, $5,000; Isaac M. Hally, $2,000; A. Herzog, $2,000, and A. Nichols, $2,000. With the exception of Schulz, Southwick & Co., Sam'l Roberts and Herzog, all the firms are in Nos. 3, 5 and 7 Hague street. The estimated damage to these buildings is $15,000. It is said all the losses are covered by insurance.

THE OCEAN HORROR.

Full Details of the Wreck of the Vera Cruz.

Only Thirteen Lives Saved--Fifty-Eight Lost.

Terrible Hours of Suffering Before the Final Catastrophe.

Capt. Sice and His Crew Washed Overboard While Trying to Save the Steamer.

NEW YORK, September 4.—A St. Augustine, Florida, dispatch says the painful surmise regarding the fate of the steamer Vera Cruz has been fully confirmed, for a few survivors have happily escaped death and are now safely on shore. The ill-fated steamer foundered at half-past 5 o'clock Sunday morning

IN THE MIDST OF THE HURRICANE

having labored painfully for some hours in a heavy sea. Of seventy persons who were on board when the steamer left New York only thirteen are known to have been saved, so that

FIFTY-SEVEN PERISHED.

There is uery little hope that any addition will be made to the list of survivors, for so long a time has elapsed since the steamer went down it seems impossible for any more to be found alive. The hurricane that occasioned the disaster precluded assistance or succor from other vessels. on Saturday afternoon the steamer encountered a strong gale, which soon increased in fury. The sea ran very high and the Vera Cruz labored heavily for some time. Every effort was made to keep her before the wind, but it was found necessary at 1 o'clock Sunday morning to throw out a drag to keep her head above water. This secured the desired effect for the time being, but the gale had now grown to a hurricane and began breaking over the steamer. Each succeeding wave tore away pieces of her upper works until her deck was finally swept clear, even the rigging being torn and shattered. The drag ceased to fulfill its functions and as the sea rose over her bows and deluged her decks they soon reached the furnaces and the hatches being torn from their fastenings by the billows. The fire being out soon put a stop to the engines and the City of Very Cruz lay at the mercy of thewaves. Not even the donkey pump could be worked to relieve the vessel of the water she was rapidly making in her hold. In this extremity Capt. Van Sice order his men to throw overboard the deck load. The task had been begun about midnight, but the sea was too heavy to permit the crew carrying out the Captain's orders, for while thus engaged several of the men were carried off their feet by incoming seas and many of them were washed overboard.

IMMENSE WAVES

EXTINGUISHED THE FIRES,

CAPT. VAN SICE

and his officers acted courageously in the performance of their several duties, but were one by one washed overboard from their stations as the steamer labored in the trough of the sea. As near as I can ascertain, the captain perished fully an hour before the vessel finally succumbed, and as nearly all hands were lost, the few remaining alive on board now saw that there was no hope so they; took the life-preservers, the lifeboats having already disappeared. Sailors and passengers then seized fragments of the state-room doors or any other movable article that would float and

AWAITED THE END

all knew to be at hand. The surviving sailors state the vessel was about thirty miles off the shore at this time, the hurricane being one of terrible fury. By the time the ship-wrecked men and women had equipped themselves with their impromptu buoys the final catastrophe occurred, it being then about 5:30 a. m. With one awful and tremendous lurch the steamer suddenly sank into the ocean, the swirl

CARRYING DOWN MANY OF THE LIVING.

Of the seventy souls on board before the storm began only thirteen have reached land alive. These thirteen were all men, three of them passengers, eight deck hands, one engineer and one oiler. They were all in the water, buffeted by the tempestuous sea, for from twenty-four to twenty-six, hours and there is no doubt that but for this ordeal many more would have been saved, for there can be but little doubt that several perished after the foundering of the steamer through exhaustion. The bodies of the victims came on shore thirty miles south of this place. Among them was that of

GEN. TORBERT.

His body was placed in a cask and buried on Wednesday in the grounds of Mr. J. H. Bothefuhr near Claytona, a settlement opposite Mosquito Inlet. The bodies of two of the steerage passengers have also been found; at least that is their classification by the survivors. The bodies of three females were recovered from the waves along the shore, and four other men, probably sailors. These like the others have been duly buried.

The Survivors.

NEW YORK, September 4.—A telegram to the Board of Underwriters from Jacksonville, announcing the loss of the steamer City of Vera Cruz, says the survivors of the crew are there in distress, waiting assistance from the owners.

Awaiting News.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, September 4.—Sad scenes are witnessed in the office of the owners of the lost ship City of Vera Cruz, where relations and friends await some particulars of the disaster, which do not come. The steamer American, which was terribly damaged in the recent Jamaica cyclone, arrived at Baltimore this morning.

SAVED.

CHESTER, PA., September 4.—A. K. Owen, of this city, a passenger on the Vera Cruz, telegraphed from St. Augustine that he is safe.

More Particulars.

SAVANNAH, GA., September 4.—A special to the Morning News, from St. Augustine, says last night several survivors of the Vera Cruz aarived from Halifax River. The party consists of Owens, a passenger, an engineer, an oiler, and four seamen. On Sunday, at 5:30 a. m., a sea struck the steamer, putting out the fires and lights and washing away the boats and rafts. The captain was the first man lost. The steamer sunk on the 28th ult., thirty miles from the coast. It is supposed the other survivors are further South. Gen. Torbert's body was washed ashore and was buried at Dayton.

The Niagara Safe.

HAVANA, September 1.—The steamer Niagara, from New York, arrived yesterday. She reports very heavy weather.

SPORTING SUNDRIES.

Hanlan, the Oarsman—Rarus to Try and Beat St. Julien's Record.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, September 4.—P. Lorillard's imported stallion Glenlyon died at Rancocas. The horse was brought to this country in February, 1879, in a very poor condition. Glenlyon was got by Stockwell out of Glengowrie by Touchstone. Glenlyon was a great loss to his owner, as Lorillard has great faith in the sons and daughters of Stockwell.

RARUS.

Bonner says he intends shortly to let Rarus or Edwin Forrest trot on a mile track and is confident Rarus can do 2:10 or better. There is no indication that the exhibition will be free for all the public who desire to be spectators.

HANLAN.

Hanlan, the oarsman, who sails to-day for England to meet Trickett, the Australian oarsman, says when he returns, whether he is victor or vanquished, he announces his willingness to row any man in the world five miles on Toronto Lake, and allow his opponent five seconds at the finish. Hanlan says he would not encounter a week of seasickness for anything short of victory on the other side. It was remarked that the betting was about 100 to 70 in favor of Trickett, and Hanlan said that he had heard that six or eight thousand dollars had been sent to Detroit, Mich., from Australia, for investment on their man.

CONEY ISLAND

The day is a delightful one for the reopening of the course of the Coney Island Jockey Club. A great crowd will be there. It is a lovely spot.

A CONFLAGRATION.

Lively Blaze in Salamanca, Pa., This Morning.

BRADFORD, PA., September 4.—About 1 o'clock this morning the Dudley House, the largest house in Salamanca, was discovered on fire. A moment after the flames broke through the roof and the entire building was enveloped. The building was located in the solid portion of Main street and spread rapidly up and down the street on both sides. There are two fire organizations in the place, but they were powerless to cope with the conflagration. A steamer and hose company from Bradford and hose company from Olean were summoned by telegraph and arriving, soon checked the fire. The principal losses are as follows: Hevenor Bros., $50,000; insurance, $38,000. Barse & Culver, $20,000; insurance, $10,000. Dudley House. Dudley, of Buffalo, owner $10,000; insurance, $3,000. Those mentioned were the heaviest sufferers. There were 22 buildings in all consumed. The total loss is estimated at $157,000. Insurance about $60,000. The fire is supposed to have been caused by a lamp explosion.

IS IT A CAMPAIGN DODGE?

The Republicans Said to be Forcing the New York Lottery Company to Contribute.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, September 4.—The police force of one precinct, by the direction of Superintendent Walling, was occupied yesterday in arresting clerks in the office of the Louisiana Lottery Company. Of this performance the Truth newspaper says: It is well known that while the police are used to war on a private company, one of the commissioners of police is hobnobbing in Saratoga with the man who controls two or three swindling concerns which are crippled in their business by the reason of the well-recognized fairness and honesty of thh Louisiana company. Is this blackmail or is it a campaign dodge to raise funds for the Republican party? It is either one or the other.

The Brooklyn Bridge.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, September 4.—The Brooklyn bridge is almost an accomplished fact, and the citizens across the river are beginning to feel the influence of this enterprise. Rents are considerably lower in Brooklyn than on this side of the East River, and some prominent business houses whose titles have hitherto been landmarks of New York have already decided to move. The Barns and Munro, publishing houses are the first to move away.

Bank Statement.

NEW YORK, September 4.—Loans increase, $1,204,700; specie decrease, $20,900; legal tenders decrease, $794,100; deposits increase, $763,900; circulation decrease, $54,500; reserve decrease, $964,175. Banks now hold $5,679,400 in excess of legal requirements.

Joe Emmet.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, September 4.—To-day the charge of habitual drunkenness has been withdrawn against J. K. Emmet, the actor, but he is still in the Tombs, on the charge of intoxication.

Rolling Mill Burned.

PHILADELPHIA, September 4.—Marshall & Bros.' sheet-iron rolling mill burned. Loss, $50,000; insured.

THE END APPROACHING.

Playthings Abandoned by the Tourist.

Theaters and Actors—Fatal Appetite of a Favorite Artist.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, September 2.—It is the office of the moralist to drop into the silent ballroom and deserted banquet hall at daybreak to compare the dismal scene with what was lately all brilliancy and joy. To prod about among the tattered fragments, the forgotten gloves and cast-away, withered roses and crumbs of cake, while the wan sunlight flickers in places; where colored flambeaux shed a mellow luster on careless, happy throngs. Such unpleasant philosophers will soon, no doubt, be prowling through seaside hotels and over long, untenanted stretches of yellow sands, when, like Robinson Crusoe, the discovery of a footprint will startle them.

The revelry goes on—the sun shines, the waltzes play and luckless little crabs still bite convulsively at deceptive baits, but for all that the season's days are numbered. Time, the great physician, smiles grimly and knows that the gay, glad summer has at most but a few riotous, reckless hours to live. Let it squander them all—as a castaway will lavish away his gold in a barren island—he will not need it again. It can buy him nothing. Summer is going now with a rapidity which fairly makes one's heart ache. Pluck up the roots of passion flowers and fling them into the sea—they will bear no more buds.

Still people linger in pleasant places. Still the old happy life goes on, madder and merrier than ever, but it is the madness and merriness of the galop just before the breaking up of the ball. It is the song of the dying swan. The summer has been so long, so bright, so breezy, so full of sea and sun and light and love and ease, that to many it seems a positive grievance that September came to tread out all the anemones and spoil everything, making mammas cross over the big bills, and the sea too cold to bathe in and all the pretty dresses seem passe and a lot of other disagreeable things.

There are two classes of luckless persons in unmitigated despair over the end of summer—lovers and

HOTEL PROPRIETORS.

The festive places which knew the sumptuous clerk will know him no more, and his Koh-i-noor "the dark unfathomed caves" of the pawnbroker will hide for a time. There's a grand scramble now for the things that used to be. Fathers have spent all the money they mean to for one season in what they are pleased to term in their boorishness—tomfoolery. O'Flannery pere swears he never sat on a hotel piazza in the moonlight without making a donkey of himself when he was courting, and, looking calmly and dispassionately at Mrs. O'Flannery, one is constrained to believe him.

Pretty girls are counting their trimphs as nuns do their beads, and looking tearfully at certain fans and ossified bouquets which are identified with one or more pleasant adventures, declaring they will never use such and such a perfume again because "poor dear Charley always smelled so of it." A great many wiser and sadder mothers are going home—taking back the undisposed of daughters who dressed superbly, danced like sprites, flirted audaciously and did all society demands but marry a "catch." The girls who go home unengaged look spitefully at the tawdry finery which they trailed in vain over grassy lawns and moon-lit piazzas. The jolly girls who went for the fun of it, leaving their sensible hearts behind them in safe keeping, are glad to get back again, and, dozing happily over the autumn's inevitable worsted work, will dream it all over again, and they are the girls who have really had a glorious time, "quite too awfully sweet for anything."

Vows are exchanged in whispers to write twice a week, and never, never, never to forget some one, which it is needless to say are quite forgotten before all the dandelion balloons have sailed away through the pale sunshine. There grows a fatal weed, full of lethean wine, of which these artless young persons partake, and which bears the flower "remembrance" and the seed "forgetfulness." The bloom which is beautiful passes away; the seed which is bitter remains.

When once one determines to quit the scenes and sites of conquests and pleasures it is a noticeable fact that rapid transit is the thing most desired. If we must go, let us go quickly, and almost all people over-stay their play time, and are fearful, like Cinderella, that the coach will turn to a pumpkin, and the coachmen to gray-liveried rats. The fear seems totally unfounded when we step into one of the luxurious, swifty gliding sleepers of the old favorite which bears us away to that ever dear, dirty old city which we are glad to return to at last. The Vandalia is the most popular and quickest route cut of New York for the West. It is a good way to see familiar faces, to watch the crowds at the Jersey City Depot taking this popular route, which gives glimpses of the biggest cities, densest forests and grandest scenery on the road. Nobody ever tires of Horse-Shoe Bend, the Pack Saddle. Cresson Springs on the summit of the mountain, the blazing caldrons of the iron-works, the Conemaugh and the blue Juniata. The Vandalia is second nature to us Western folks.

Drums and fifes in wild discord, timed to the untrained feet of election multitudes, now smash the unpatriotic citizen's mild repose into ten thousand splinters, while smoky and lurid torches blaze fitfully on banners carried in the interest of the future President. Good Democrats this way stoutly believe in Hancock, in spite of all the opposition in the world. Rival squadrons, composed of the "callow youths" of the country, sometimes meet in battle array and a lively fight with torches ensues, in which everybody comes out greasy, valorous and unconvinced. One very small, very unkempt and unrecruited recruit the other day followed a dozen boys through a small alley-way, who just at dusk had raised a gaudy Democratic banner. Wishing mildly to evince his approbation, and also if possible to become a vicandier if nothing else, he sent up a rather thrilling "hurra for Hancock and English." "He aint English, confound you," said one of the lieutenants, pausing to administer a dark optic. The luckless recruit in vain attempted an apology. Hancock's champions won't stand any flings at his nationality.

Tin pans and old wash-boilers make night hideous here, and it is presumably as bad in St. Louis, where as many partisans live as anywhere in the world. Like the Tam O'Shanter scene at the kirk, the fun is becoming fast and furious.

The dressmakers and milliners are again about to sway the world with their rose-colored batons, and even a nod and beck. Grande dames who rule the court and grove bow submissively before the awful fiat of the dressmaker and timidly plead for novelties before their neighbors, other grande dames. No modiste on earth can furnish at once, and so those who can pay best naturally carry off all the delicious scarecrows in dresses, cloaks, hats and bonnets, for which less fortunate women are sighing in vain. The antiquarian who has dug up a love for ancient china ewers and cups has started up from the sleep of a century; the wardrobe antiquary also, and now we are to be short-waisted, long-sleeved, with that captivating simper with which our great-grandmothers ensnared and slaughtered hearts and were perpetuated in gilt frames, instead of a learned sort of a Greek professor scowl which we have been cultivating, and which we owe to Boston. Middle-aged ladies will now begin to wear muslin frocks and lace mits to evening parties, and slippers with lariats over the ankles. Ladies are to look like our respective maternal ancestors slipped from their portraits, and we are all to be delightfully musty and antique.

In truth, any change will be welcomed after years and years of flounces and puffs and polonaises—the same thing over and over always.

No one will object to short, wide skirts handsomely shirred into a waist limit, with an agreeable lack of wasted material in ruffles, which have been corded and hemmed, and scalloped, and vandyked, and everything under the sun.

Girdles or broad belts, with full, short waists, are refreshing in showy costumes, while an extreme presents long, flat waists and narrow, clinging skirts. We are finally getting around to the peaked hat, flounced tuck up, and quilted petticoat and who knows how soon powdered hair will come in? It is a head dress vastly enhancing to the beauty of rosy cheeks and saucy, dark eyes. It is only fair that fashion should do something for the masculine world, who, in spite of much contempt and pooh-poohing, are always greedy for new neckties and seamless shirts, which an angel has invented, without buttons. The Continental waistcoat and knee-breeches might rise up now from the dust of our last hundred years and enable our Watteau damsel to go to church with a beau in kind.

Very rich dark reds and greens are to be worn this fall and winter. Everybody is thankful for this. We might have had a nasty gray or raw Sienna in this grand rush after aesthetics. Ladies who are frightened away from the full, plain skirt very much shirred can gratify an old fondness for paniers by gracefully-arranged scarfs, which tie loosely in front and are artistically intermingled behind. Trains are not to be banished from drawing-rooms, although for promenade the skirt, which is absolutely straight, short and round, will be universal. The wisdom and good taste of this must be apparent to all, though in all probability the fashion will be short-lived, as it does not admit of such wastes and ruins as modistes love. It is a style altogether too economical. It is not their business to invent a dress which will last untarnished through an entire season. They are rather dismayed at the greediness of ladies for this style; but it was an amiable concession which they were obliged to make. Art demanded it. Real artists are inventing dresses for their wives and daughters, and it is rumored that we are no longer to have those outrageous, vapid, meaningless caricatures in the magazines which look like anything but women, and yet which every real woman tries to resemble with all her might and main. The best artists are to make the figurantes which are to have some as a foundation for style. This will be a feature to recommend magazines to some who have hitherto fled from books and journals so given to travesties on the human form divine.

Those who desire to begin the fall with new-fashioned dresses can begin scampering from store to store in a mad attempt to match plaids or to try and secure the broadest bars of yellow ever flung like jackstraws on a green ground. All suit stuffs for out-door costumes are of plaid or to be combined with plaid. Fall dresses will have suit sacques or dolmans finished with a hood. Ladies are to indulge in long ulsters with deep pockets and huge buttons again instead of the unsightly and barbarous old water-proof circulars, which made any woman look like a witch. It is a little early yet to define positively the exact cut of fall dresses. Everything is a little vague yet. I shall try and describe a few patterns, some from leading establishments. Perhaps, next week things will be under way. It will depend largely on the weather, which has been delightful for a week. If it continues so bright and sunny, with such delightful breezes, we will play it is still summer and put off thinking up winter costumes.

The theaters are popping open everywhere with eclat and new paint. At Niblo's Monday night the Kiralfys put on that wild "Around the World in Eighty Days," burlesque, spectacle or extravaganza. And strange to say, it filled the house. But the audience do not try to follow Phineas Fogg, Jules Verne or Passeportant, but the light heels and toes of the clever people who, in new tights and spangles, are doing new feats in dancing. The scenery was perfectly magnificent, and the property tinsels and satins, the gorgeous Necropolis picture, the processions, marches and Hindoo thingamys were all superb. In the cast was Miss Helen Tracy, once a favorite leading lady at the Olympic theater, St. Louis.

Haverly has brought out the Lone Fisherman in a renovated condition at his Fourteenth street Theater, and the "New Evangeline" is very funny still, and very much better than other things dished up for the theater-going public. It pays to run a good burlesque, but the good ones are like angels' visits. New York is full of superannuated actors who wear frock coats buttoned up very tight, tall silk hat and kid gloves, with a general air of "Vincent Crummles" about them. They haunt the rooms of the Dramatic Bureau, look for letters there in answer to others they are usually writing, and wait for engagements while giving it as their opinion that "acting ain't what it used to be in the days of Ned Forrest, Tom Hamblin, the elder Booth, Kirby, Wallack and those old chaps."

It is rather sad—this decay of actors—and one feels sorry that they are on the road to starvation, some of those old-school fellows who foam at the mouth, tear passion to tatters, and prance like wooden hobby-horses across the stage. The day of this style is dead, and its exponents are dying out fast too.

Unhappily there is a prospect that we are to have another spell of "society plays" this winter, when mawkishness and six hundred dollar dresses will usurp the place of honest merit and good acting will fall far behind and the new wardrobe of Sarah Bernhardt will attract women to gaze on the tragic skeleton more than on her power or pathos.

The fact can not be disguised much longer that Fritz is a willing captive to the ignominious fetters of the god Bacchus. He did not appear at the theater the other night, and his good-natured audience went away believing their jolly, musical Fritz to be sick. Yesterday his son, J. K. Emmet, Jr., and his mother, made application, so it is said, to have him restrained of his liberty while this mad appetite for drink incapacitates him for the following of his profession. Emmet is a bon vivant; he likes the good things of life; but his companions, knowing his weakness, are to blame for enticing him to drink. He has just left a reformatory asylum, which humiliating method of curing him was thought necessary by his family. He will, no doubt, be very sorry for it all when the fit wears off. This same wine cup has ruined many clever and great men.

Seven Weeks of Starvation.

New Albany (Ind.) Special, 2nd.

For seven weeks Ruel Robinson, a boy of fourteen, suffered intensely from an aggravated attack of lockjaw, caused by an injury to one of his hands. In all this time the only food that he partook of was water and a thin gruel, forced into his mouth by prying open his jaws with a thin chisel. Both his drink and gruel were taken in such small quantity that his physician felt confident the lad would die of starvation. But after seven weeks of the most intense suffering he has recovered, and now can out-eat the notorious Dr. Tanner. The boy's recovery is the more remarkable from the fact that he was reduced to skin and bone by the long starvation he had to undergo from his inability to eat and swallow.

MY brother traveled through Monroe Co., Ohio, last Fall, and found some of our friends using and recommending the Hamburg Drops very highly. They said they would rather be without bread than Hamburg Drops. We procured some, and the remedy proved as recommended. G. H. Diehl, Mowrystown, Ohio.

THE CUSSED CENSUS.

Some Statistical Views of Mr. Oscar W. Bleeck.

A Problem Presented that Needs a Solution.

The following is the larger part of a communication received from Oscar W. Bleeck, a gentleman of high standing as a statistician. He pursues altogether a different line of reasoning from Mr. Henry W. Williams, whose statement appeared yesterday, but shows with equal clearness the necesssity of having a new and correct census:

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

The Democrat published on the 4th of August, 1870, that the United States census takers had found 23,000 persons in the Ninth Ward, and that therefore the population of St. Louis would be about 276,000.

On the 6th of August, 1870, only two days later, the State census of 1868 was republished by the Democrat for the information of all concerned:

Ward. Township.	Number Reported.	Added for Omissions, Estimated.	Total.
1	10,104	404	10,588
2	15,484	929	16,413
3	15,032	902	15,934
4	15,818	949	16,767
5	16,685	1,167	17,852
6	18,499	1,295	19,794
7	13,230	1,058	14,288
8	15,580	1,402	16,982
9	22,747	1,592	24,339
10	18,127	1,450	19,577
11	18,511	1,140	19,621
12	9,928	397	10,325
Total	189,745	12,655	202,400
Carondelet	7,501	300	7,801
St.L. Township	8,587	170	8,751
Total	205,833	13,125	218,952

The Democrat was requested to explain how it was possible to figure out an increase of 73,600 if the population of the Ninth Ward, on which the calculation was based, had decreased from 24,339 to 23,000.

This question was answered on the 16th of August, 1870: Each ward is divided in two districts; so far is finished the Third Ward, containing 21,428 inhabitants.

Fifth Ward, containing 25,000 inhabitants.
Ninth Ward, containing 22,790 inhabitants.

And all persons not found by the Deputy Marshals were requested to report at the Marshal's office.

The result was the following:

Ward.	Population.	Families.	Persons to Family.	Dwellings.	Persons to Dwellings.
1	38,708	5,908	5.71	4,703	7.17
2	21,855	4,642	4.71	2,873	7.64
3	23,878	4,830	4.94	2,827	8.45
4	31,493	5,861	5.37	4,050	7.78
5	29,774	5,553	5.36	2,946	10.11
6	29,192	4,572	6.38	3,531	8.27
7	18,508	3,382	5.47	2,447	9.56
8	26,710	4,534	5.89	2,672	10.00
9	22,922	4,895	4.68	3,066	7.48
10	20,623	4,439	4.65	3,142	6.56
11	32,580	6,834	4.77	4,654	7.00
12	19,621	3,981	4.93	2,764	7.10
Total	310,864	59,431	5.23	39,675	7.84
Carondelet	5,387	Part is included in First Ward.
St. Louis T'p	9,003
Total	325,254

If the State census of 1868 and the United States census of 1870 were both correct, the population of St. Louis must have increased in two years at least 119,421, or over 50 per cent.

In the Third Ward 2,450 persons were added to the original list of the Deputy-Marshals, in the Fifth Ward 4,774, and the Ninth only 132! Why not more in the Ninth Ward? The population increased in the Fourth Ward from 15,818 to 31,493, over 100 per cent. Can it be possible that the Assessor, a State and county officer, who took the census in the Fourth Ward two years ago, could only find one-half of the inhabitants?

The population increased further in the Third Ward from 15,032 to 23,878; over 50 per cent.

Fifth Ward from 16,685 to 29,774; over 80 per cent.
Sixth Ward from 18,499 to 29,192; over 60 per cent.
Seventh Ward from 13,230 to 18,508; over 38 per cent.
Eighth Ward from 15,580 to 27,710; over 70 per cent.
Tenth Ward from 18,127 to 20,623; over 11 per cent.
Eleventh Ward from 18,511 to 32,580; over 75 per cent.
Twelfth Ward from 9,928 to 19,621; almost 100 per cent.

It decreased in the Ninth Ward from 22,922 actually found and sworn to by the assessor to 22,747 in less than two years.

The United States Deputy Marshals visited, in 1870, 39,675 dwelling houses.

The Assessors reported on the second day of September, 1867:

17,758 dwellings, barns, stables, assesed at	$21,132,065
311 mills and factories, assessed at	1,340,400
173 schools and churches, assessed at	1,898,670
18,242	$27,371,135

Only an increase of over 21,917 dwelling houses in less than three years, conside rable more than were built during the preceding 100 years in St. Louis.

In the report for the year 1867 the Health Commissioner declares solemnly: "Heretofore were the mortality reports not reliable, but hereafter they will be," and in 1877, "This shows an average of 14 90-100 deaths daily during the fiscal year, and represents an annual death rate of 1[illegible].88 per 1,000. In other world: One-half of the inhabitants of the city of St. Louis die befo[illegible] they are five years old, and the other half g[illegible] fat and do not kick the bucket until they [illegible] 200 years old, and have to commit suicide or kill each other if they want to go to heaven sooner! Who can swallow that?

Prof. C. M. Woodward, of Washington University (ex-member of the School Board from the Thirteenth Ward), can not[illegible] and states the facts in regard to the censuses [illegible] a communication to the President of the School Board February 8, 1879, as follows: On page 648, volume 1, of the United States [illegible]sus of 1870, we find that 93,469 of the 3[illegible]4 people in St. Louis were children [illegible]m five to eighteen years of age. Th[illegible] is at the rate of 301 in 1,000. On page 631 we find, taking the whole State, there were 335 to 1,000. Hence the number of children per 1,000 in St. Louis in 1870 was but ninety per cent of the number per 1,000 in the State. The correctness of these figures is shown by comparing Missouri with other Western States, like Illinois, Iowa and Arkansas; and St. Louis with cities like New York, Cincinnati and Chicago. In 1870, the number of children from five to 18 years per 1,000 people in Missouri was 335; in Illinois, 322; in Iowa, 331; in Arkansas, 342, etc.

As the population was 310,864, the number of children of "school age" was 111,289 instead of 94,848 reported to Jefferson City. In 1874 the census of school children was taken with great care by Mr. Higgins, continues the learned Professor, C. M. Woodward. The result was 138,133, a result which was regarded as quite correct. When compared with the United States census four years before, we see a total increase of shool population of 26,842, or an increase of about 6,710 per year. This indicates an annual increase of the population of the city of 18,700 and corresponds to the growth of the city as shown by the erection of buildings, which have averaged between 2,000 and 2,500 houses annually. The learned Professor finished his investigation with this clincher: "It seems to me that the only competent organization to take a city census is the Police Department," and the following main figures in tabular form:

Year.	Report to State.	Basis.
1866	66,880	5.21
1867	70,222	....
1868	76,443	....
1869	83,322	....
1870	94,848	....
1871	109,400	....
1872	108,327	....
1873	127,606	....
1874	138,133	....
1875	153,128	....
1876	161,496	....
1877	107,266	6.20
1878	97,556	....

The above are "facts," sworn to by thousands of the best and most honest citizens of St. Louis. One-half must be perjured cusses or fools.

The school census of 1878 indicates 343,000 and the one of Mr. Higgins four years previous indicates 386,000 people in the city!

How long will the citizens of St. Louis swallow such nonsense?

In the year 1868 the population was 202,400, and 20,590 children attended school; in the year 1879, 55,000 children attended school and the population ought to have been 500,000 and not 333,700 or still less if the factors, proportions and relations between population and public and private schools have remained the same as they were in 1868.

Is it not high time to get at the true inwardness of that fraud called "the census of St. Louis?

RACE TRACK SCENE.

Shriving Dying Jockey on the Brighton Beach Course.

From the New York Sun, Sept. 2.

There was a fair attendance at Brighton Beach yesterday. The races were of the usual order, with the exception of the hurdle race, the last on the programme. Five horses ran in this race. One of them, L. L., was mounted by a lad named Kearns, who had worked around the stables for a few weeks. He had never ridden in but one hurdle race previous to yesterday. When he reached the backstretch, L. L. was third in the race. Leaping a hurdle, his feet caught in the top, and he went over in a summersault, Kearns striking head first on the track, and the horse falling on him. The horses following dashed over the hurdle, while a chorus of "Ohs!" arose from the crowd on the other side of the track.

The horse soon rose and walked away, but his rider lay motionless in the dirt. Many thought he was dead, and a string of jockeys, stable boys, and idlers started across the field toward the boy. In the line towered the tall form of young Father Dougherty. With the natural love of his countrymen for horseracing, he had been watching the equine contests. When the Father came to where the boy lay, with his bloody face turned to the sky and his lilac and red colors covered with dirt, he saw that the boy was insensible and apparently dying. Requesting the jockeys, stable boys, and others to kneel, the reverend Father offered up a prayer for the boy, anointing him and performing other services of his Church for the dying. The scene was strikingly impressive. Horsemen and riders who had never knelt in prayer before obeyed the request of the Father, their bronzed, earnest, and hard faces softening in sympathy for the crushed jockey. All this was unknown to the crowd on the quarterstretch and in the grand stand. Shortly afterward a jockey returned to the crowded stretch and remarked to a companion; "I guess Kearns will die, for they all kneeled on the track and prayed for him over there."

Kearns, who rode L. L., was thrown at the third hurdle on the backstretch. He struck on his head, cutting his face badly. The horse threw a complete somersault, falling on the boy, and caused serious internal injury. Kearns was carried away in an insensible condition after the ceremonies narrated above.

Last night a report came from the track that Kearns had died.

Depraved Animal Taste.

From London Nature.

The subject of a depraved taste in animals is an interesting one, which has not been studied as much, perhaps, as it might. In human beings it would seem to depend on ill health of either body or mind, but in animals it would seem as if it might be present and the animal enjoy good health. One remarkable instance in an herbiverous animal we can vouch for. It occurred in a sheep that had been shipped on board of one of the Peninsula and Oriental steamers to help supply the kitchen on board, but while fattening it developed an inordinate taste for tobacco, which it would eat in any quantity that was given to it. It did not much care for cigars, and altogether objected to burned ends; but it would greedily devour the half-chewed quid of a sailor or a handful of roll-tobacco. While chewing there was apparently no undue flow of saliva, and its taste was so peculiar that most of the passengers on board amused themselves by feeding it to see for themselves if it were really so. As a consequence, though in fair condition, the cook was afraid to kill the sheep, believing that the mutton would have a flavor of tobacco. Another very remarkable case has just been communicated to us by Mr. Francis Goodlake; this time a flesh-eating animal in the shape of a kitten, about five months old, who shows a passionate fondness for salads. It eats no end of sliced cucumber dressed with vinegar, even when hot with cayenne pepper. After a little fencing it has eaten a piece of boiled beef with mustard. Its mother was seen at least once to eat a slice of cucumber which had salt, pepper and vinegar on it. The kitten is apparently in good health, and its extraordinary taste is not easily accounted for. Even supposing it once got a feed of salmon mayonnaise, why should it now select to prefer the dressing to the fish?

The Mistake of Mothers.

From the New York Graphic.

Yesterday's Tribune contained a capital article on middle age, the argument going to show that the period of middle age is too often one wherein the father and mother sacrifice time, talent, aim, ambition and even necessary recreation for their children's sake. It is so. Thousands of mothers slave, grow prematurely old, forget and neglect their own accomplishments and drag themselves about as mere appendages, something between a nurse and a housekeeper, to a daughter too young to realize or appreciate the sacrifices made for her. It's every person's business to make, morally, mentally and physically, all of themselves that is possible, and this settling down at thirty-five or forty into an old woman and taking a back seat that the daughters may shine is a mistake and defeats the very end sought. There's often altogether too much done for children, and the chief result is that of making them helpless, dependent creatures. Mothers to-day are saying, "I don't care for myself now, so that Effie or Nettie get their full quota of accomplishments," when, if that mother went on building herself up on the basis of her own matured experience, asd ceased to sink and absorb herself so completely in Effie and Nettie, the world with which she came in contact might be profited. Society needs matured women as live, potent factors, and the shining should not be left entirely to fledgelings. Were there time and space, a word would be said here in this matter for the old man, too, though he is more apt to take care of himself.

Over Their Child's Coffin.

From the New York Sun, 2nd.

The suit for limited divorce instituted by Mrs. Mary M. Earl against Chas. E. Earl, a well-to-do undertaker, who is sexton of the Classon Avenue Presbyterian Church in Brooklyn, has reached an unexpected ending. The couple were members of the church named and were married by the Rev. Dr. Jos. T. Duryea, its pastor, who at the last hearing in the divorce suit was a witness for the plaintiff. Much bitterness between the parties was manifested in court. Recently one of their two children fell sick, and the physician recommended its removal to its father's house, where it died. When the mother went to attend the funeral she met her husband face to face at the coffin, and in their common grief she fell into his arms weeping. They pledged forgiveness to each other, returned to their old home, where they are now living together, and yesterday the wife's lawyer applied to Judge Reynolds for permission to discontinue the divorce suit.

ASTERS.

Walled in with fire on either hand
I walked the lonely wood-road through;
The maples flame above my head,
And spaces whence the wind has shed
About my feet the living red
Are filled with broken blue.

And crowding close along the way
The purple asters blossom tree
In full profusion far and wide
They fill the path on either side,
In loose confusion multiplied
To endless harmony.

The autumn wood the aster knows,
The empty nest, the wind that grieves,
The sunlight breaking through the shade,
The squirrel chattering overhead,
The timid rabbit's lighter tread
Among the rustling leaves.

And still beside the shadowy glen
She holds the color of the skies;
Along the purpling wayside steep
She hangs her fringes passing deep,
And meadows drowned in happy sleep
Are lit by starry eyes. WILL H. NAVE.

NEILSON'S FUNERAL.

The True Story of the Actress' Engagement to Admiral Glyn.

Olive Logan's London Cor. Phil. Times.

Along a perfumed pathway came the funeral procession of the beautiful young actress, whom thousands of people in America have admired for many reasons. Artistically Neilson adored America, not merely for the wonderful harvest of money she annually gleaned there, than for the warm appreciation her personations drew forth from admiring audiences all over the length and breadth of the land.

Socially she preferred England, naturally enough. Outside of New York, there is no society in America of that peculiar kind classed under the broad name of "upper Bohemian"—a society as elegant, refined and lavish in its material surroundings as that of the highest nobility, far more intellectual and spiritual than that, gay, bright, entertaining, and yet thoroughly unconventional—asking no questions, telling no lies. Persons penetrating it are requested, so to speak, to "like it or to lump it." I think almost everybody in the world likes it; but a great many are forced to lump it on account of the conventionalism in force in their own local districts.

Yet, Bohemian or not Bohemian, Adelaide Neilson was about to fix the final gem in the circle of brilliants her beauty and her genius had won her. The necessity for keeping her secret no longer exists, and now I publish it. She herself told me last summer that she was engaged to be married to Rear Admiral Glyn, the naval officer who took the Prince of Wales out to India, and whose standing at court is of the highest. As his wife her life would have been a delightful one. Certain circumstances would have barred her presentation to the Queen, but there are many ladies of fashion and standing who do not enjoy this honor, and yet who go freely into brilliant and aristocratic society and hold their own there. This would have been Neilson's position.

She would have had a gentleman of birth and distinction and one who adored her for her husband, and her house would have been a rendezvous for the brightest, gayest and most entertaining in all classes of London's multiplex life. When she told me last year of her intention to marry and leave the stage I ventured to say that she was unwise to do so. Her revenue from her stage life was very handsome, and the adulation to her beauty and talent was an incessant song.

"Yes, yes, I know all that," she replied, as we drove in her pretty little brougham up Regent street. "But then if you knew how my affianced husband loves me! It is perfect idolatry!"

"And do you think it will continue?" I asked.

"I am sure of it," she replied warmly. "Yes, you have no idea how stanch and true he is. His love has continued for many years. No matter where I go, or how long I stay away, I find him ever the same when I return. I long to marry him; I wish I were to do so to-morrow."

"Why is the marriage delayed?" I asked.

"I wished to see his daughter married first," she answered, the shadow of deep reflection darkening her lovely face. "I do not not think it fair to the young lady to see herself ousted from her position as housekeeper by a father's young wife."

There was another reason besides this; one which she did not mention, but one of which every one knew. Her divorce from Mr. Lee was obtained in America, and, therefore, was open to contest in England. She would, perhaps, have been sued for bigamy had she remarried, and the lawyer who would have charge of her case was one of the principal mourners at her funeral, George Lewis, and an aristocratic looking man, a well-known habitue of first night performances, and one of the cleverest speakers at the London bar.

A striking feature of the funeral exercises was the presence of harmonious color in the usual jetty trappings of the paraphernalia. The open grave was lined with a beautiful bright purple cloth. The body of the hearse was an invisible blue—the blue black of an autumn plum. The sacred monogram, I.H.S., was of silver, and a silver cornice of rich metal work surmounted the vehicle. The horses' harness was silver. The coffin was the delicate yellow of English oak, and when it lay in the earth I looked down into the yawning gulf and saw a gloomy bank of color wreaths and crosses of purest white flowers intermingled with the soft greenery of leaves, and bud encasements were heaped upon the long, slender, yellow oaken casket, and amid them fluttered a pink paper, the programme of her last night's performance in America. The purple cloth descended along the newly cut sides of the earth, and from the flowers and the spaded soil there arose a sweet fragrance, tender, delicate, a faint perfume which almost seemed like an exhalation from the fair, dark-eyed woman who shall entrance human senses never more.

You should have seen the grief of Compton. Tear-blotted, agonized from sorrow, I scarcely knew him from the pretty strippling I first met in Miss Neilson's blue satin hung boudoir, taking tea. Near him is Lord Henry Lennox, to whom I was introduced by Mrs. Hicks-Lord, whom gossip at one time said he was to marry. Other men of distinction are there, and act as co-mourners with the various celebrities of artistic life. Fanny Josephs, Mrs. John, Miss Mellon, Mrs. Bernard Beere, and many others are present, all clad in deepest mourning. The doctor of divinity who performed the service was a man of impressive presence, and who seemed to feel a penetrating interest in the lovely subject of his supplicating prayers.

The report that Miss Neilson left a very large estate is unfounded. Just prior to her last visit to America she told her friends that she had no money whatever. What she had earned she had either spent or lost in unfortunate speculations in New York real estate. She lived extravagantly always, and was generous to the utmost degree to those about her. The person who, perhaps, will mourn for her most keenly and most durably, will be Mrs. Goodall, her lady companion for many years, her secretary, her duenna, her what you will. If Miss Neilson has made a will she certainly has made provision for Mrs. Goodall. But is it likely a bright creature, so young and fair, and with apparently so long a future before her, would have cared to sit down to compose her last testament?

The attendance in the graveyard was very great, and to obtain a last look at the coffin there was such a pressing of the crowd that to be caught in it was a circumstance fraught with danger.

Peruvian Women.

Cor. Philadelphia Times.

Lima is the paradise of woman. They are called beautiful; so they are, if you admire black eyes and ebony tresses. They are generally occupied, but do not work; they look upon labor as degrading. They rise early, take a cup of tea, and go to mass. Their toilet requires but a few minutes. Their walking suits are neat and pretty; in this respect they surpass us. The dress is black, and never touches the ground; there is no fussing nor fumbling with trains. A white skirt is sometimes seen below the dress, with a deep hem and two tucks, and always white and clean. Prunella gaiters are generally worn; the hands are bare; the manta is thrown over the head, falling gracefully down almost to the bottom of the skirt. The subject of dress claims most of their time and attention. Their ball dresses and opera and soiree suits are magnificent. Their boots especially are beautiful. No people have naturally as small feet as the Peruvians. The Peruvian-made boots are too small for foreigners. Peruvian ladies are not very intelligent; as soon as they pass beyond the school girl period they care little for books or literature. Many learn to play the piano when young, but do not care to continue when married. They are excessively courteous in their manners. They are always wealthy in imagination—at least, they never speak of poverty. They love to smoke. Although handsome when young, they scarcely turn 20 when they begin to fade. One thing always lasts with them, and that is their gait. Their movements are gliding and graceful; the same is true of the men.

A MODEL STEAMER.

The Remodeled City of Brussels, of the Inman Line.

New York Journal of Commerce.

The steamer City of Brussels, of the Inman Line, now lying at Pier 45, North River, has been entirely refitted since her last trip to this port in September, 1875, and has been thrown open for public inspection. A large number of gentlemen interested in shipping have taken advantage of the opportunity to inspect the splendid vessel. The saloon has been moved forward considerably, so as to occupy the position where the least motion is felt. It has been handsomely upholstered, and the fittings throughout are of the most elegant description. The number of state-rooms has been reduced, and those remaining have been considerably enlarged, so that they are now larger than those of any other Atlantic steamer. They have been furnished with every requisite for comfort and convenience, such as hot and cold water, commodious wardrobes, etc., while every room is connected by electric bells with the steward's quarters. A ladies' parlor, beautifully decorated, and a most comfortable smoking-room have been provided—everything, in fact, which good taste and liberal expenditure, directed by a complete knowledge of the requirements of passengers, could effect. And we have no doubt but that this vessel will become a favorite with those who have to cross the Atlantic. New double compound direct-acting engines have been placed in her of 600 nominal and 3,300 actual horse-power, and her average speed is expected to be at least 14 1-2 knots an hour. She will sail for Liverpool on Saturday, under command of Capt. Watkins, who has been in the service of the company for fifteen years, and has earned a high reputation for seamanship and geniality.

A Bad Counterfeiting Gang.

Buffalo (N. Y.) Special, 1st.

The police authorities of this city have completed a piece of work, as the result of which they believe they have broken up a gang of burglars and counterfeiters. Several criminals are under arrest, their names and offenses being as follows: Edward Anderson and George Hawthorne, burglary and making and passing counterfeit money; Willard J. Moore, counterfeiting, and Charles Gotthelf, receiving stolen property. Anderson, who is a notorious criminal, came to this city last fall and went to work making spurious coin, which was passed principally on street car conductors. On making the acquaintance of Hawthorne, Anderson induced him to go into business with him. The places robbed by them were boot and shoe stores at Town Line, Lancaster, Suspension Bridge and in this city, and the Post-offices and two stores at Gasport. Between $1,000 and $2,000 worth of property was obtained and sold to Gotthelf. The burglars separated at Suspension Bridge. Anderson, going toward Towanda, met two young fellows, and the three went to a store on the Ridge road and robbed it. The goods they took to Youngstown. While Anderson was after a boat the two young men were arrested, and on his return he also was arrested and all were taken to a hotel, from which they escaped. Anderson, with another party, went to Stafford, broke into two stores there and sent their booty to Bradford, where they staid nearly a week. Then they went to Arcade, where they broke into a store and secured a lot of goods. Three officers chased them, revolvers were fired, and the young men who were with Anderson were arrested and escaped. He then went to Pine Valley and thence to Charlotte Center, where he was arrested. Five years ago he was arrested at Lyons for burglary and larceny, and broke jail. The counterfeit money was made in a shoe store kept by Moore, who assisted in the work.

Romantic if True.

Toledo (O.) Special to Cincinnati Gazette.

A young colored girl of intelligent appearance, who arrived in the city to-day, relates a surprising story of her past life, which is generally believed to be true. She gives her name as Maggie Brooks, and says that she is sixteen years of age. Fourteen years ago, while living in this city with her parents, she was kidnapped by a French woman traveling in this part of the country, and taken to Cuba. She was there kept as a slave, fed on loathsome food, and treated in the most inhuman manner, being often shot at, and is now carrying a bullet in her neck. She was taught, however, to paint and make wax flowers, and from the result of her labors her mistress derived a large profit in the Philadelphia, San Francisco and Paris Exposition. When Gen. Grant visited Cuba she managed to make known to him her real status, and the General at once quietly set about to effect her release, which he accomplished in a short time, and had her taken to Galveston, Tex. From there she made her way to this city in search of her parents, of whom she has as yet found no trace.

RIVER NEWS.

The Fannie Tatum for Paducah at 5 p. m.

The E. H. Durfee leaves for Kansas City this evening.

The Western is to-day's 4 p. m. packet for Keokuk and St. Paul.

The fine steamer Dora, Clarksville packet, is always "on the go."

Pilot Bob. Kirkpatrick has returned from New Orleans by rail.

The Montana is making fast time home to St. Louis from New Orleans.

For St. Paul, the Libbie Conger, Capt. Boland, on Monday afternoon.

For Lower Missouri River points, the Mattie Belle leaves this evening.

The Beaver's barges from St. Louis have unloaded an independent cargo at Memphis.

Remember the regular Chester and Grand Tower packet, Gen. Rucker, off to-day at 5 p. m.

The Iron Mountain tow-boat always hits business at the right time. She will load soon and go out on good water.

Robert K. Price, of Catlettsburg, Ky., for several years connected with Big Sandy steamers, died on Wednesday.

The fine steamer Paris C. Brown, Capt. Halliday, Mr. Brown clerk, will leave for the Ohio on Monday. Shunk & Jenkins, agents.

A letter received yesterday by Ryland's Bureau says: "I have two first-class barges. Will sell one for $25,000, or both for $5,000—net cash."

2,700 was the number of packages taken from St. Louis to Memphis by the Beaver's barges, loaded by the independent agents, Shunk & Jenkins.

The cases taken from the tow-boat Raven are positively declared not yellow fever or other contagious disease.

C. A. Rice, M. D.

Pittsburg Chronicle: The fine new steamer completed under the immediate supervision of Capt. J. F. Stockdale, for the Cincinnati trade, has been attracting considerable attention.

Ryland's Bureau received the following letter yesterday: "Will pay cash for a fast sternwheeler, 110 to 140 feet long, not over five years old, good cabin, cylinders 12 inches diameter, 4 feet stroke."

N. O. Picayune: The P. Line steamer E. C. Carroll, Jr., has recently been thoroughly overhauled and painted and will enter the Tallahatchee and Yazoo river trade, leaving here Wednesday, September 8.

Dick Lightburn is Owen Finnegan's general agent in Memphis. How dare you, Dick, encourage foreign capital, outside boats and strangers? Dick has "general supervision" over the entire Finnegan steamboat line.

Capt. Jas. D. Parker is Secretary of the Memphis and Ohio River Packet Company, and head of the boat store firm of Parker, Wise & Co. According to Capt. Jim Wise he will be elected next President of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce.

Vicksburg Commercial: The scare about the sick men taken from the towboat Raven Sunday morning has vanished into very thin air. More than half of the men have now been sick a week, and as none have died, and all are getting well, the whole affair has become a source of amusement instead of apprehension.

The Pittsburg Telegraph gives the dimensions of the new Cincinnati packet for Mart. Noll: Length 238 feet on deck, 35 feet beam, 5 feet depth of hold. The cabin is extremely handsome and contains 48 staterooms, roomy and elegantly fitted up. Engines are 19 1-2 inches diameter, 5 feet 7 inches stroke. Boilers are of steel, four in number. Wheel 22 feet diameter, 28 feet buckets. The Scotia embodies the best efforts of Pittsburg mechanics.

Memphis Appeal, 3: The W. P. Halliday and barge, from St. Louis, passed down yesterday morning for New Orleans. She added thirty tons freight at this place. She was detained twenty-four hours by getting aground at the foot of Island Thirty. The Josie Harry, Capt. Milt Harry, arrived last evening from White River with three new bales of cotton, the first of the season from that stream, consigned to Hill, Fontaine & Co., Porter, Taylor & Co., and Dillard, Coffin & Co., from Augusta, Ark. The hull of the West Wind, with the machinery on board, is lying near the foot of Market street, where she will receive her cabin. It is rumored that as soon as completed she will be placed in the Memphis and Hale's Point trade as a semi-weekly packet, in command of Capt. B. O. Michell.

Indecency of the London Press.

From the New Orleans Times.

It has always been the fashion of Englishmen to pretend that in America there is no such thing as respect for privacy, but that everybody meddles with everybody else's affairs in the most vulgar and intolerable way. It may, however, be safely said that were Lady Burdett-Coutts an American, and were she to marry an Englishman, whether young or old, there is not an American newspaper read by decent people that would print the insulting paragraphs and letters that are now appearing in the leading London newspapers. There is not an American who would dream of writing her a letter such as the Prince of Wales recently wrote her, and though a crowd might assemble to see her married, no one would dream of hissing her. It is in London that the most flagrant instance of indecent meddling with an estimable lady's private affairs has occurred, and among the meddlers are the heir to the throne and the very journalists who are fond of discussing the vulgarity of Americans. In all probability they will succeed in driving the lady out of England; but should she think proper to come to this country, she will find that, vulgar and meddlesome as the Americans are said to be, they will treat her with a courtesy that will put to shame the contemptible conduct of her coutrymen.

THE Collector's office is not the road to Congress.

THIRTEEN survivors of the lost steamship Vera Cruz have been picked up.

MR. HORNER will be as honest a Judge as he is popular, and that is saying a good deal.

ADVICE to a Republican candidate who expects to buy his election: Don't. It won't pay.

ONE word to the soreheads: The Democratic city ticket will be elected, the few growlers to the contrary notwithstanding.

OUR latest private information from New York is to the effect that the Democrats there are absolutely certain of success by a larger majority than in 1876.

IT is quite evident that J. Milton Turner is in terrible earnest. He proposes that the colored voter shall count for something more than mere sawdust in the body politic.

EVERY Republican political puppet in St. Louis is worked by wires leading into Rosenblatt's office. The tax-gatherer manipulates the bummers, but Sultan Filley furnishes the programmes.

IF the Republican will join us now we think we will be able to get a new census for St. Louis. Of course its assistance will amount to nothing; but the appearance of unanimity will be worth something.

DR. PREETORIUS' beautiful banner bears only the names of the Westliche Post and James A. Garfield. The knave of clubs pinned on the corner might be made to do duty for the candidate for Vice-President.

CHICAGO raised $20,000 to assist the Government officers in taking the census of that city. It would be a good investment for us to spend that much in getting the Government to take another census for St. Louis.

THE nomination of Charles P. Johnson for the House of Representatives is, of course, equivalent to an election. When the Seventeenth Ward made that nomination it made the leader of the next Legislature.

THE more one thinks about it the stronger the Democratic city ticket appears. There is not one candidate upon it who will not, upon examination, be found to be a popular, clever and well deserving gentleman.

KANSAS keeps a lot of commissioners in the East begging on behalf of its starving people. Since the close of the census it has withdrawn its invitation to the colored paupers of the South. The latch-string has been hauled in, so to speak.

A CAREFUL canvass of the real estate agencies and inquiry at other sources of information reveals the fact that there are not to-day over two hundred houses for rent in St. Louis. People, therefore, who think the city has lost its inhabitants are slightly mistaken.

THERE is no end to the fun to be had in local politics. After the Republicans hold their city primaries it will be an easy matter to have a sham suit brought against the Filley Committee, in the course of which the managers will be compelled to account publicly for every dollar received and disbursed by them. Politics can be made to yield a rich fund of humor in this way.

BOSS FILLEY, who assists Rosenblatt in manipulating the Republican machine in St. Louis, seems to have made politics a trade. He is a member of the National Republican Committee. He is also a member of the Executive Committee of the National Republican Committee. He is a member of the Western division of the Executive Committee of the National Republican Committee, is chairman of the Republican State Committee of Missouri, and a member of the Republican City Committee of St. Louis—with one or two States to hear from. Does anybody know of a Democratic ring-master who devotes himself so exclusively to the cause of politics or who holds so many positions near the throttle-valve of the party machine?

WHATEVER may be said of Democratic ring management in St. Louis, it can not be denied that the party has furnished some honest, capable, upright officials. The names of a dozen first-class men now in office, chosen and elected by Democrats, can be cited. It is not so when the Republican ring succeeds. Its fiduciary officials are nearly all failures.

WE thought it about time for the Republicans to utilize the canal-boat experience of their candidate for President. A lot of clerks and office-holders in Washington City have organized a Garfield Tow-Path Club. There is something suggestive in this title. If the gentle youths train assiduously and season their feet they will be able to walk home after Hancock's inauguration.

PINCHBACK sends word to Washington that the Republicans will certainly secure substantial results in Louisiana this year. We would like to know what Pinchback's estimate of "substantials" is about this time. Ten years ago nothing less than a United States Senatorship and a bag full of money fresh from the State Treasury would have looked well in Pinch's eyes, but now a steady janitorship in a negro church and a suit of second-hand clothes would have a very substantial appearance to him. All things are relative in this world.

IN a letter published elsewhere about the census agitation Mr. O. W. Bleeck says the City Assessor found only 18,000 houses in 1867 and that therefore the Government's report of 39,000 houses in 1870 must be incorrect. We answer that the report of the Assessor in 1867 cannot be accepted as correct on this point. Everybody knows there were more houses in St. Louis in 1870 than have been built in the city since that time and it is a matter of record that 20,000 buildings have been erected since 1870. To say there were only 18,000 houses in St. Louis in 1867, or only 20,000 in 1870, is ridiculous. Mr. Bleeck presents some interesting figures, but we are far from accepting his conclusions in all instances. We publish his letter because we want to see this subject fully ventilated.

SOMEHOW or another we had absorbed the idea that our androgynous friend, Mrs. E. J. Polk, the Woman Suffragist, was running for Congress, but the card from her, printed in another column, informs the public that it is her husband, W. W. Polk, who is anxious to climb the marble steps which lead to glory and the national Capitol. Since Mr. Polk has received the indorsement of his devoted wife and is vouched for as a friend of Freedom and Universology we pledge him our undivided support. Mrs. P. very modestly places her goal at the Mayoralty of St. Louis. We take pleasure in nominating her on a platform of universal suffrage without regard to age, sex, color or previous condition. With the amiable Mr. Polk representing the Second District in Congress and the intellectual Mrs. Polk wielding the baton of authority in the Mayor's office we rather think St. Louis would be able to spread her silken sails and float like a silver gondola on a Pactolian stream to the soft music of a Euterpean bassoon.

UNDER the hue and cry raised by a lot of Democratic soreheads about ring management in local affairs, the Republicans are howling vehemently about dark-lanternism and denouncing the ticket of Thursday as a piece of ring jobbery. There are probably traces of ring handiwork about that ticket. There are always a few finger points of this character in political conventions. But Democratic management in St. Louis is angelically innocent compared with the vulgar, iron-bound methods employed by the Filley-Rosenblatt clique to stifle Republican sentiment and parcel out political favors. The recent selection of a City Committee, so bitterly inveighed against by the good Dr. Preetorius was a blot upon our civilization. Nearly every man on that committee is a tool of Boss Filley and Sancho Panza Rosenblatt, and the decent voice of the party was as effectually suppressed in choosing these creatures as is the voice of the Moujik when an Emperor is set up in Russia. It is a committee largely made up of saloon-keepers, vile corner loafers and parasites. With the exception of ex-Gov. Fletcher and a few others, there is scarcely a man on the committee who can boast of character or good repute. At the dictation of the machine-grinders who make the Collector's office a point d'appui, these fellows make tickets for the Republican voters of St. Louis. No amount of dust that the Republican organ can kick up about Democratic Dark-lanternism can blind the public to the fact that the Republican party in this city is completely at the mercy of a grasping, dirty little ring, the members of which could be named on the fingers of one hand.

IN his introductory to his biography of Hancock, Col. John W. Forney says: "I think it is high time for our country to realize that the parrot politicians running up and down the land, shrieking Republicanism and abusing honest people because they will not bow to such temporary fantococcini are mere imposters." In a convenient foot-note the erudite Colonel informs us that fantococcini are dramatic representations in which puppets are substituted for human performers. We always supposed that a fantococcini was something good to eat. Mr. Forney, we fear, is too learned to write for simple-minded Democrats.

AN Eastern telegram announces this morning that an irade was issued yesterday by the Porte. This is important, if true, and the only wonder to us is that nobody seems to have thought of this very simple solution of the Eastern question before. It is true nobody knows what an irade is, but that makes no difference to us. We feel by a sort of a prophetic instinct that it is a move in the right direction at last.

A FREETHINKERS' Convention is sitting at Hornellsville, New York. A joke can be made out of this statement by dropping out the letters "orn" and the last syllable "sville," and then adding something before and after the residuary fragment, but this kind of a witticism always gets very tired before it arrives at fruition.

A REUNION of the Smith family was held at Peapack, New Jersey, last Wednesday. Three thousand descendants of the sturdy Hollander John Schmidt, were there and, strange to say, there wasn't a plain John in the crowd. The nearest approach was a swell who called himself John Dayton Smith.

THE collision of the Christel with the Gartconnel on the high sea and of the Sumatra and the Dragon in the English Channel, yesterday, goes to show that it has become almost as difficult for two ships to cross each other on the same sea as it is for two trains to pass each other on the same track.

ABEDDIN PASHA has tackled the Montenegrin frontier. We're Abeddin that the Pasha will get that boundary line so tangled up before he gets through with it that nobody in the Principalities will be able to tell what ward he lives in or whether he is a Christian or a bloodthirsty Turk.

EDWARD BEARING, a young New York student, was pitched of the top off a diligence in Switzerland, the other day, and was killed. He had on his person a draft on a London bank for $25,000. Our school-boys will carry loose change with them when they travel.

THE osseous remains found in Chicago the other day, supposed to belong to a mastodon, turn out to be a portion of the maxillary and mandibular bones of a primitive Chicago hotel clerk.

A NIHILIST plot to blow up the Czar has been discovered at Charkoff. Charkoff one more failure for the party of progress.

THE Democrats feel that they have a big spoke in their wheel since Ben. Butler spoke at the Hub.

AT this stage of the game it looks very much as if Ayoob Khant.

OUR friend Mrs. Polk can appreciate a Jolk, it seems.

ENTERED FOR CONGRESS.

Mrs. E. J. Polk Speaks a Word for Her Talented Husband.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I return thanks to the POST-DISPATCH for what courtesy it shows me—small favors thankfully received.

I was not forced to call on the Republican for assistance, for the POST-DISPATCH so gracefully opens its columns to one of the "giggling" ninety-nine out of every hundred. I feel that the editor of the POST-DISPATCH has gotten his ideas of women from having spent the earlier years of his life in small boarding-houses or hotels kept on the European plan. Had the women of St. Louis known that in this melancholy way the P. D. editor was deprived of the purifying influence of a mother and sisters, they would have perused his flippant incubrations with more charity. That he possesses the germ of a high order of intellect is clearly manifest, which entirely settles the physiological part of the question. As on more than one occasion he has given me a thrust in regard to my Congressional aspirations, I beg to inform the talented editor of the P.-D. that I am not an aspirant for Congressional honors. My ambition soars higher. I would like to be the Mayor of this grand old city of progressive reforms. This is the acme of my desires at present.

But I know of no gentleman so well fitted to represent the people of the Second Congressional District as the talented editor of the POST-DISPATCH, if he will only follow the promptings of his large, generous heart and become the advocate of universal freedom. However, if the editor of the P. D. is too timid, too time serving to come out for freedom, it is the duty of the people to nominate a man that has the nerve and the honesty, and that man is my husband, W. W. POLK.

From the Baltimore Gazette.

Gen. Garfield is said to have "large and healthful" views on the woman question, and is quoted in a recent speech as saying that the female suffrage issue "is rising in our horizon larger than the size of a man's hand." We fear the General is sorely in need of votes.

HITTING BACK.

The Southern Merchants and Some Salesmen Going for the Hotels.

The Question of Enticing Merchants from the Hotels as Viewed by the Other Side.

The POST-DISPATCH of yesterday contained an account of the grievances of the hotel proprietors in relation to what is termed the interference of business houses in legitimate hotel trade. It is true that the public hostelries have been suffering a loss of trade for some time through this source, and in order to prevent an increase the proprietors have organized an opposition. The published account of yesterday dwelt principally upon the hotel side of the question, and in order not to make any invidious discrimination the other side is given to-day. A reporter visited several business houses and other places and succeeded in meeting a number of Southern merchants who expressed their views on the subject. These gentlemen had been "subjected to the undue influences" of solicitors, and when interrogated had no hesitancy in saying why they had withdrawn their patronage from the hotels. The first gentleman seen was of Clarksville, Texas. Mr. Baker is the largest cotton shipper from Texas, his business in this commodity alone representing $120,000 a year. "Are you stopping at a hotel?" was asked.

"No, sir. I am rooming up on Olive street above Nineteenth."

"Has any one employed any means to prejudice you against the hotels?"

"No. Mr. Henderson, who represents Gilkeson & Sloss, invited me to partake of his hospitality, but he certainly did not mention one word prejudicial to any hotel. I suit my own convenience and prefer to take a room where I can have some comfort to being cooped up in small oven at a hotel."

"Has the price of the hotels anything to do with your stopping on the outside? Do you find it cheaper to take a furnished room?"

"Not at all. I get a room where I can see my friends, and the place where I was invited to stop by Mr. Henderson is frequented by a number of Texas merchants with whom I do business, and I find it more convenient for that reason than a crowded hotel. Besides, I can get a cool room, which is next to an impossibility in the hotels. They give you a small apartment, with scarcely any and even no ventilation, and in summer that is insufferable. I am not opposed to the hotels, and most of the time I take my meals there."

D. Y. BERRY.

Mr. D. Y. Berry, of Charleston, Arkansas, formerly of the firm of Berry & Newton, repeated in substance the expression of Mr. Baker. He said: "I am not opposed to the hotels and I do not think the solicitors are. Last night I was invited to supper by Mr. Bourlard, who took me to the Laclede Hotel, where we got a good meal. The only reason I have for not sleeping at a hotel is because it is not as comfortable as places I can get on the outside. In addition to this, the hotels are constantly crowded with drummers, who are sometimes very annoying. I am possessed of sufficient sense and discrimination to think for myself, and simply because a merchant places a room at my disposal, I do not feel myself bound to allow him to control my purchases. I buy where I please, and so far none of the gentlemen whose hospitality I have enjoyed has endeavored to influence me."

COL. WARTHAM.

Col. Wartham, of Paris, Texas, was foun seated at a desk in Chase & Cabot's, occupied in correspondence.

"Colonel, are you one of the gentlemen who have gone into the new departure?"

"Well, yes, to a certain extent. I take my meals at the hotels. Yesterday when I arrived here I told Col. Owen, of the Laclede, that I would board there but would get a room somewhere else."

"What is your reason, Colonel, for taking a room on the outside?"

"My own personal comfort, sir. The hotel rooms, with the exception of a few, which are usually previously engaged, are small and imperfectly ventilated. I take a room in the summer only; in the winter I stop wholly at a hotel. No one has attempted to turn me against the hotels, and Col. Lacy when he was in Texas agreed with me to get a room."

In connection with this matter, the following communication was received from two representatives of Gilkeson & Sloss:

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Late issues of the city press give place to some unkind allusions concerning the hospitality of certain cotton solicitors and traveling salesmen of this city, and which, if left unobserved, would be to refuse to demand justice not only for ourselves but for an intelligent class of buyers who semi-annually visit our city.

With the kindest feelings for those whose views differ from ours we can readily see how naturally our branch of trade would oppose another should the business of the latter seem in conflict with the former.

We can see why New Orleans as a cotton market would oppose St. Louis as a cotton market and vice versa. We can see why hotels would oppose restaurants, we can see why one hotel would even oppose another. Following the idea based upon this proposition, we can see why hotels do not endorse the action of commercial men who are in the habit of extending hospitality by way of lodging to their mercantile friends who visit the city. Yet by no course of reasoning can we justify any one in referring to us as "sharp workers," as "commercial combinations" to divert legitimate trade, "cliques" to deprive Southern merchants of just competition, etc. Now, what we have to say is that we, as agents of factors, but not cotton buyers, do rent rooms: that we pay rent for the same, but owe no allegiance to any combination or clique and know of no organization to manipulate the Southern merchant who is sufficiently intelligent to select his own associates. The Southern merchants treat us kindly when we travel among them, manifest their appreciation of our manner of business by their endorsement. They are our capital. If when they visit the city they find it more pleasant and sociable to lodge with us than at a hotel our "latch-string is out" and no editorials or threatened meeting of hotel men can sever the ties of friendship which have been strengthened by years of social and business relations. We have kind feelings toward every branch of honest industry in our future great city and especially toward the hotels, where most of us take our meals every day. But enterprising sensation can not shut off the social inclinations of our nature or dry up the fountain of hospitality, and we intend to quietly look to our own business, pursuing the tenor of our way, the views of other people to the contrary notwithstanding.

BOURLUND AND HENDERSON.

The Gold Cure.

Mr. P. D. Cordell, whose practical philanthropy has made itself felt in St. Louis and throughout the West for some years past, is engaged in introducing what he believes to be a perfect cure for drunkenness, and Mr. Cordell's recommendation is in itself the very best which the new cure could have. It is a preparation of the double chloride of gold, and wherever it has been introduced it has worked like a charm. The most besotted inebriate has yielded his appetite to two bottles of the remedy, and instances can be related by thousands wherein the craving for drink, which had lasted for years and dragged men down to utter wreck and ruin, has yielded to the magic touch of this new healing agent. The discovery of chloroform was a great step forward, but this later remedy is even a more beneficial one to the race than it was, for it roots out the propensity to ruin which has been for some inscrutable reason implanted in every human breast. Dr. S. E. Keeley is the discoverer of the drug, but Mr. Cordell is devoting his life to the distribution of it. He is joining chemistry and temperance together in one cause, and no one can doubt that he will achieve a great victory over the demon of drink.

Jacksonville Items.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JACKSONVILLE, ILL., September 4.—General John M. Palmer telegraphed yesterday that important business engagements will prevent his being in this city to-day to address the people, as previously advertised, but promises to come at an early day. This will be a great disappointment, as the General is a great favorite with the Democracy and thousands will be here expecting to meet him, not having heard of his telegram. The prospect of Democratic success in this county grows brighter each day and the majorities for the National, State and county tickets next November will be 100 per cent greater than in 1876. Mark this prediction. The same is true of the surrounding counties, and hence the Democracy feel sure that Illinois will be on the side of honesty and good government after the next election.

Under the auspices of the Veteran Democratic Club of this city Hon. G. W. Johnson, of Pittsfield, delivered a stirring speech in the park last Thursday evening. Mr. Johnson is an eloquent speaker, and made a fine impression upon our citizens who were fortunate enough to hear his address.

The recent rains have put the ground in fine condition for seeding, and from present indications a larger number of acres of wheat will be sown in this county than last year, which was largely in excess of former years.

Wood River Baptist Association (colored) met in this city on the 1st inst. and will continue over the Sabbath.

The venerable Peter Akers, D. D., who reached the age of ninety years on the 1st inst. will preach at Centenary Church to-morrow. He has been in the ministry for sixty years and fifty years of that time in this State, and is now a member of the Illinois Annual Conference.

Hon. T. W. McNeely, ex-member of Congress, from Petersburg, was in our city yesterday and reports the Democracy all right in Menard county.

Mr. George J. Dod, the Republican nominee for State's Attorney in this county has, challenged E. L. McDonald, the Democratic nominee, for a joint discussion, which we presume will be accepted.

Death Caused by Drink.

About 9 o'clock yesterday morning a number of boys purchased a large quantity of Catawba wine and some whisky, which they drank while sitting on the curbstone of the sidewalk at the corner of Fifteenth street and Clark avenue. Dennis Grady, a lad ten years of age, drank more than his companions and was soon in a state of beastly intoxication. He was taken to his home, 1506 Belmont street, shortly after 11 o'clock. When he appeared his parents, who recognized his condition, made him go to bed, for the purpose of sleeping off the effects of the liquor. He went to sleep, but awoke in the afternoon and complained of feeling ill. Towards evening his appearance grew so bad and his complaints became so frequent that Dr. Ware, a physician residing in the neighborhood, was called in attendance. After ascertaining the probable cause of his patient's illness, and making the necessary examination, the doctor administered some medicines. A few minutes before 11 o'clock he made the alarming discovery that the boy was sinking rapidly from the effects of congestion of the brain. Twenty minutes past midnight death ensued. This morning Dr. Ware issued a certificate which met with the approval of the Coroner, who ascribed the cause of the congestion to the whisky and the wine.

The Fruit Fair.

The preparations for the horticultural exhibition by the Mississippi Valley Horticultural Society are about completed, and the rapidity with which articles for exposition and competition are coming in is unprecedented. Mr. James C. Evans, ex-President of the Missouri Society, arrived in town this morning from Clayton county, bringing with him five barrels of choice fruit and several boxes.

Miss Clara Bidwell, a young lady of about 18 years, arrived to-day, to personally superintend her contribution. She brought sixteen barrels of fruit, which she will enter for the sweepstakes premiums.

Thirty barrels of fruit were received this morning from Southern Illinois, and a large number of boxes. St. Joseph contributes 21 packages to-day. The executive committee express themselves as confident that this fair will be the largest exposition of fruit ever seen at one time in any place. The doors of the Fair will not be opened to the general public until Tuesday night. Especial attention will be paid to the ladies.

Franz Sink's Death.

Capt. Charles E. Sencerbox, master of the steamer Minnesota, testified before Deputy Coroner McBride to-day that about 10 o'clock yesterday morning the breakage of some rigging caused a stage to fall to the deck of the boat and injure Franz Sink, who, in company with several other deck hands, had been seated on the guard near the capstan; that Sink was examined at Clarksville by Dr. Mudd, who suspected there were internal injuries, but said no bones were broken, and that he died at about 5:30 last evening. After examining other witnesses McBride rendered the verdict that death was occasioned by internal injuries resulting from the fall of a stage, which had been supported by a manilla rope that was defective originally or was made so by its chafing as it passed through the pulley.

Arrested at the Circus.

Samuel W. Watkins and Joseph Abbott took advantage of an opportunity which presented itself last evening and stole a large quantity of valuable clothing from the trunks in the dressing-room at Barnum's Circus. Officer Barney Burke determined to apprehend the thieves and accordingly hid himself behind a large box near one of the tents and there awaited developments. After waiting some time his patience was rewarded by the appearance of the men for whom he was watching. They were attempting another depredation when Burke took them in custody. They now occupy cells at the Four Courts.

Another Abandoned Baby.

Belle Burke, colored, living at the rear of No. 718 Market street, brought a white child about two weeks old to the Four Courts today, and reported that it was left at her house last Sunday morning by a tall, slim lady, who requested that it be kept a few minutes while she should "go around the corner." Officer Ryan took the infant to St. Ann's Orphan Asylum.

City Hall Notes.

The park laborers were paid their wages for August to-day.

There were sixteen burial permits issued by the Health Department to-day.

There were over two hundred people of all ages, colors and classes who visited the City Dispensary to-day for gratuitous treatment.

The city collections to-day were as follows: Lucas Market scales, $12; City Market scales, $66; City Marshal, $75; Chief of Fire Department, $324 50; Recorder of Deeds, $113 50; Coroner, $13 30; City Collector, $6,091 91. Total, $6,696 76.

ROSH HOSHANA.

The Jewish New Year Festival in St. Louis—How it Will be Observed.

Monday next is the Jewish New Year, the great festival of the Hebrew race. Here in St. Louis, where the old faith has nearly ten thousand followers, the ceremonies ushering in the new year will be of a peculiarly impressive and solemn character. In the Temple Shaare Emeth (the Gates of Truth) preparations are being made on a grand scale for the coming festival, and the edifice will no doubt be crowded to its utmost capacity.

Dr. Sonneschein, the Rabbi, has been preparing for the holiday for some time and all the arrangements are in a state of forwardness. The temple just now is in a state of disorder owing to the additions which are being made to it, but all of the scaffolding will be cleared out in time for the opening services. The first service will be to-morrow evening and will be solemnized in the English language. This is only preparatory to the fete of Monday. All day long on the 6th of September the gates of the temple will be open and the faithful will flock in before the sanctuary. Old hymns whose wording and melody have come down from the ages before Christ will be intoned, and the ceremonies will be in English, German and Hebrew. A choir of children have been under instruction for sometime at Shaare Emeth, and this will be one of the best features of the day. The other Jewish congregations are also preparing for the coming feast. There are four in the city besides Shaare Emeth, the United Hebrew, the corner stone of whose new temple was laid the other day with much ceremony, and the B'nai El. These three are Reformed jews. There are two societies of Orthodox Jews, one of whom are seceders from the United Hebrew congregation, and the other is a Russian body who cling probably with more tenacity than any of the others to the old order of things. These five societies will each celebrate the occasion with the utmost beauty and solemnity.

Two weeks from Monday comes the Feast of the Harvest. The temples will be decorated with flowers and fruits and all the gear of harvest-time, and the offerings of the first fruits will on that day be made. The most solemn feast in the Jewish year, however—that of Yom Kippur—comes on September 15. From the services of that day every Jew is believed to go forth with a conscience pure toward God, having forgiven all enmities and sought also God's forgiveness for all transgressions. In a newness of spirit, reconciled to both God and his fellow-men, the Jew closes the solemnity of Yom Kippur, which he began with a religious service, with a mind eased of offense toward his Creator. This experience happily fits him for the Feast of Tabernacles, which follows five days after the Day of Atonement, and continues seven days, but only the first and last days are full holidays. It is the great harvest festival, and closes the series of the New Year observances.

ATHLETIC.

The Handicap Tournament—The Trotting Matinee Postponed.

The athletic tournament at the Red Stocking Base Ball Park, on Compton avenue, commenced this afternoon in the presence of a fair attendance. The only event to be contested to-day is the 100 yards amateur race for the gold medal presented by Andy Kirk. The contestants are Thos. Kennedy, W. R. Dolan, Gus. Beck, L. W. Day, S. J. Tobin, E. Grache, W. A. Shehan, J. J. Berry, Mr. Washburn, John Diamond and Frank McGarry. The race will be run in heats in the following order:

First heat—Kennedy, Dolan and Tobin.

Second heat—McGarry, Berry and Washburn.

Third heat—Shehan, Beck and Diamond.

Fourth heat—Day and Grache.

At the conclusion of the heats the contestants making the best time will run for the prize, a gold medal.

To-morrow will be the big day. For the 130 yards handicap there are entered Samuel Wessler, J. Stratton, L. Huber, Robt. Gray, R. Dolan, E. Grache, A. Washburn, John Diamond. For the mile handicap: F. Foley C. Laxton, C. H. Browning, M. Sheppard, Charles Roberts, L. Clinton and J. Stratton are entered.

This tourney is creating considerable interest in sporting circles. In consequence of the event there will be no game of base ball to-morrow at the Grand Avenue Park. Andy Kirk, of the Fire Department, will officiate as Judge.

Owing to the very heavy rains last night the free trotting matinee announced for this afternoon at the Cote Brilliante track has been postponed till next Saturday.

New Stock and Bond House.

Mr. G. C. Hume, formerly editor of the St. Louis Times-Journal, returned to this city from New York a day or two ago. Mr. Hume comes here, after quite a protracted absence, as substantially the representative of Messrs. H. L. Horton & Co., bankers and brokers, of New York. This house, it is generally conceded, is one of the most energetic of its class in that city, and none surpasses it in extent of resources or facilities for the transaction of business. And no house is more enterprising, or has a greater number of representatives on the floor of the stock exchange, or a greater supply of correspondents throughout the country, to keep it informed as to the movements calculated to effect the value of securities. Mr. Hume is to be congratulated in having made arrangements with and in securing the backing of so strong and enterprising a house, while the New York parties may congratulate themselves in having secured a representative here on whom they may so fully rely.

The Civil Courts.

But one case graces the record of the Circuit Court to-day, a petition for divorce filed by Minnie Cummings against Wm. Cummings. She says that the parties were married on the 13th of January, 1878, and she says his cruelty began shortly afterwards. On the 1st of July, 1878, he deserted her and she has not since seen him. The petition makes many allegations of cruelty and the parties were evidently not possessed of two hearts that throbbed as one.

Two wills were filed in the Probate Court—that of Frank Clanda and Frederick Kicker.

ABOUT TOWN.

REV. FATHER VAN SCHIL, of Lourdes, France, is in the city a guest of the Vicar-General.

ON account of the heavy rain that fell last Sunday the Rowing club picnic at Bodeman's Grove was postponed until to-morrow.

THE Missouri State University will open all its departments on Monday, September 13. The prospects for a full session are unusually good.

BISHOP RYAN, having returned from the East, will resume his regular monthly sermons to-morrow at St. John's Church, Sixteenth and Chestnut, at 10:30 o'clock.

MATHEW DUFOUR this morning gave bond for his appearance before Judge Cady to answer the charge of maltreating his wife, who lives at 1223 Chestnut street.

ABOUT $20 worth of clothes were burned at Thomas Rodgers' house, Bellefontaine road and Corcoran avenue, yesterday. The house received some $10 damages.

The Rice Surprise Party leave Philadelphia on Saturday evening, the 11th, at 12 o'clock, on a special train via the Baltimore and Ohio, and reach here at 3 p. m. Monday, appearing at the Grand Opera-house in the evening.

REV. THEODORE CLIFTON will deliver a brief lecture to-morrow morning in the Third Congregational Church on "Who should be invited to the communion table." The lecture will be in connection with the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper and the interesting ceremony of receiving and baptizing new members.

SENATOR CABELL

Purges Himself of Contempt Before the Notary.

He Testifies that He Received About $5,500

From Thos. E. Tutt and N. C. Claiborne.

How the Fund was Distributed—The Full Testimony—Adjourned Till Monday.

The taking of the Gundaker depositions was resumed this morning at Mr. McKeag's office. The time set was 11 o'clock and at that hour nobody was present but Mr. Taylor, Mr. McKeag, Notary Oldfield and Gen. Billy Ryder. Somebody suggested that Cabell was expecting to be sent for, but to this Mr. Taylor demurred, saying that under Judge Laughlin's decision Mr. Cabell was bound to come in and purge himself from contempt, failing in which he should go to jail. Mr. Cabell cut short the discussion by walking in, accompanied by his son. There were also present Frank D. Turner and Robert E. Carr, who were expecting to be put on the stand, and E. P. McCarty. The room was well filled with spectators.

Mr. Cabell began his testimony by stating that questions had been propounded to him which he refused to answer because he thought them irrelevant. He wished to have the question passed upon by competent authority as to whether he could be compelled to answer or not. The only way to bring this matter up was by refusing to answer. A competent tribunal had decided that the notary was right in his interpretation of the law. The Court has gone farther—

Mr. Taylor—I object to any comments on the opinion of the Court.

Mr. Cabell—I do not intend to make any. The Court has decided that even where the cause of action is not stated, I am compelled to answer.

Mr. Taylor—This is all out of place.

Mr. McCarty—It is perfectly right he should make a statement.

Mr. Cabell—In obedience to this decision, I am here ready to answer. I have been mortified at the way in which my name has been wantonly assaulted. I indulged in your presence, Mr. Notary, in language entirely unparliamentary, and I am very sorry that I did.

The first question was then put:

Q.—Give the names of the co-defendants who attended the meetings of which you have spoken? A.—R. D. Lancaster, Ed. Butler, F. D. Turner, Mr. Wm. Betzold and Mr. Feldmeyer. Mr. John Carroll, Mr. Mike Reilly, Dan. Kerwin, nor Mr. Stanton, were never there.

Q.—Give the names of other persons if you remember any? A.—Mr. John R. Slevin, Mr. James Tiernan, John H. Maxon and Mr. McEntire were there occasionally.

Q.—Who represented the Twelfth Ward? A.—Mr. Harrigan, and I think, Mr. James Carroll.

Q.—Who represented the Fourteenth Ward? A.—I don't know where the Fourteenth Ward is. I think Mr. Hugh J. Brady.

Q.—Who represented the Fourth besides Mr. McGarry? A.—I do not know.

Q.—Did you give any money to any person at any of those meetings, to be used in carrying the primaries on the 17th of July? A.—I did use money in the canvass.

Q.—To how many persons besides Roach did you give money for use in the election? A.—I could not say.

Q.—Who gave you the money to give Roach? A.—Nobody in particular. It was a part of a general fund got up by the friends of Crittenden. I gave money to many men, but I do not know their names.

Q.—How much money did you disburse in connection with the primaries in St. Louis? A.—I can't say. I can tell you how much I received. Some was used in paying expenses of delegates to Jefferson City.

Q.—From whom did you get the money for the purpose of influencing the delegates at the primaries on the 17th of July?

Mr. Cabell (indignantly)—I neither received nor disbursed a single cent for that purpose. I never tried to influence anybody.

Q.—Do you remember who represented the Sixteenth Ward at these meetings? A.—I think Mr. Roach. The witness went on to state that Mr. Curran represented the First Ward; he did not know who from the Second, Mr. Jas. Tiernan from the Third, Betzold the Fifth, Gallagher the Sixth, Tom Brady from the Eighth, Ninth Ward he did not know, Mr. Towhey from the Tenth, Mr. Gus. Johann from the Eleventh. Thirteenth he did not know, Hugh J. Brady Fourteenth, Mr. Harrington Seventeenth, Messrs. Maxon and Lancaster Eighteenth; from the Nineteenth, Twentieth, Twenty-first and Twenty-second witness did not know. Twenty-third Ward Mr. Huberer. Twenty-fourth, Twenty-fifth and Twenty-sixth Wards witness did not know. Think there was somebody from the Twenty-seventh, but can't remember whom. Mr. Russell was there from the Twenty-eighth Ward.

Q.—How much money did you receive for distribution? A.—I have called on Mr. Thos. E. Tutt, who gave me the packages, and he says it aggregated $4,000.

Q.—Did you get it all at once? A.—Five hundred dollars was given me the evening before the election. All the rest came together.

Q.—How much did the friends of Mr. Wickham give you? A.—I told Wickham's friends we needed money, stating no specific sum. I got this money from N. C. Claiborne. It probably amounted to $1,500.

Q.—What was the whole amount received by you? A.—In the neighborhood of $5,500.

Q.—Did you receive any money from any other State officers? A.—No, sir. I received all the money a short time before election—long after I had the interview with Mr. Wickham. It was paid not more than two days before election. Q.—Who told Wickham that he was named by your caucus as a candidate for Judge of the Court of Appeals? A.—I told him we would support him if he were a candidate.

Q.—Did you say anything about expenses then? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did you tell him about his selection in your caucus on the 10th of July? A.—No, sir. I told him so in the month of June. Mr. Wickham stated that he was a candidate for Circuit Judge, and had not thought of the Court of Appeals. I requested him to think of it. I saw him three days afterwards and sent several gentlemen to him, and he finally consented. I did not see him after this until he had written his letter of acceptance.

Q.—Who were present at your last interview with him? A.—Nobody but Messrs. Kent and Seddon, in whose office it was held.

Q.—Did you get any directions from the person who delivered the Wickham money? A.—None.

Q.—When was it delivered to you? A.—I met Mr. Claiborne on the street and we went into Lupe's, where he gave it to me. Then the witness started to describe Lupe's, when it was discovered that he meant "the Office" saloon on Sixth and Olive streets.

Q.—Was the package labeled or counted out to you? A.—No.

Q.—Was anything said to you? A.—I was told that it was money contributed by Wickham's friends to assist Crittenden's canvass.

Q.—How much of this money did the First Ward get? A.—I do not know. My impression is I gave some to Mr. Curran.

Q.—How much did Mr. Turner get? A.—I do not know. Mr. Turner received a considerable amount to give to persons whom I did not know.

Q.—How much did you give Mr. Curran? A.—One hundred dollars. He was to pay all the First Ward expense.

Q.—Did Mr. Butler get any money? A.—Yes. Mr. Butler and Mr. Maxon were familiar with the distribution to be made of the money. Mr. Butler received a considerable sum on this account. Could not say how much. I cannot recollect for the reason that a large amount of the money was distributed by his advice. I relied upon him and Mr. Turner and Mr. Maxon for all advice in the matter.

The witness was unable to tell anything about the approximate amount handed either to Turner or Butler, notwithstanding repeated questioning.

Q.—Did you give Mr. Maxon money? A.—I have no recollection in regard to the matter.

Q.—How much of the fund was disbursed on the evening you made the payment to Mr. Roach? A.—A considerable sum. I did not know how much. I do not know who got it beside Mr. Roach.

Q.—To whom did you deliver the Twelfth Ward money? A.—I can't say. I don't know the people in these wards, and cannot say anything about it.

Q.—Where and when did you deliver the Twelfth Ward money? A.—Some days before the election, probably at that meeting.

The witness was questioned very closely as to the amount of money given to the Twelfth Ward, but could not make any approximation whatever.

Q.—What was the largest sum that you gave to any ward? A.—I cannot recollect.

Q.—Did Mr. Harrigan designate the amount for the Twelfth? A.—I do not know.

Q.—Who did? A.—I cannot recollect.

Q.—Did you pay out any money at your office on primary election day? A.—I don't think I did. I believe I did not go to my office on the day of the primary.

Q.—Did you deliver money to the voters on Seventeenth and Morgan, at the polls? A.—Everybody was a voter. I handed some to my friends to use on that day.

Q.—Did you offer money to Mr. Green at the polls on Seventeenth and Morgan streets, on condition that he would throw away Marmaduke tickets and distribute yours?

Mr. Cabell, (excitedly)—No, sir; it is false, utterly false; it is entirely false, it is as false as h—l. I don't know Mr. Green at all.

At this stage of the proceedings Mr. McCarty stated that he had a very pressing engagement, and by consent the investigation was continued over until Monday at 2 p. m.

This morning Deputy O'Neil arrested John Brownry, a negro, for failing to support his family. Brownry has a family of seven small children, who are the nearest approach to wild that could very easily be in a civilized community. After locking the father up at the station-house Deputy O'Neil visited the hut occupied by the family to take charge of the children, who will be sent to the County Farm. The heavy rain of yesterday and last night poured into the miserable little hut, drenching the floor. The only articles of furniture in the room were the frame of an old bed which the seven children at night cover with sacks and rags and sleep on, a filthy mattress used by Brownry, and a little stove that had rusted from the rain. As the officer and reporter approached the hut the children ran away as if they feared something from that source. One little fellow whose body was exposed in innumerable places through the rags he wore was taken to the station house. When he was given the prisoners' meal of bread, meat and coffee he gazed upon the feast several minutes before he touched it. After the first touch, however, the meal soon disappeared. The other children will be taken charge of and sent to the County Farm, where they spent last winter.

About 8:45 this a. m. a horse attached to M. Foerstel's butcher wagon and driven by Michael Foerstel, Jr., ran away from in front of 214 North Fourth street, colliding with a team of mules owned by Nave & McCord. News Notes of the Masons, Odd Fellows, Foresters and Other Societies.

The Week's Work.

The week has ended without anything of an unusual character having transpired among the orders of mystery in the city or State. The most interesting event to occur during the ensuing week is the annual conclave of the Independent Foresters' High Court, and aside from this there promise to be pleasant times among several of the lodges in the way of socials, reception sessions, fraternal entertainments, etc.

Nearly all of the officials and members of the various lodges have returned from their summer jaunts, and the cool weather that is now approaching will infuse new life into the meetings and cause them to be more largely attended than any time since last May, so that from this time on there will generally be lively times and no dearth of newsy and interesting items of this character.

AMUSEMENTS.

The Dramatic Season of 1880-'81 Fairly Under Weigh.

Attractions at the Three Theaters—Uhrig's Cave—Notes and Gossip.

The regular dramatic season of 1880-'81 will be fairly inaugurated on Monday evening, when the three theaters will all be open for the season. The Theatre Comique follows suit on Monday week next, and then all the houses of amusement in the city will be running. The first Thespian temple to throw open its portals was the Olympic. Tony Pastor's Combination was the attraction. Tony Pastor's engagement closes with the performance this evening.

The Olympic.

The Harrisons, consisting of Miss Alice Harrison, Mr. Louis Harrison, Miss Theresa Wood (nee Harrison), Miss Carrie Daniels, Mr. R. E. Graham, Harry Warren and W. H. Thompson, appear at the Olympic on Monday night in a new play by B. F. Woolfe, the author of "The Mighty Dollar," "Millions," etc., entitled "Photos." The Chicago Tribune says of the piece and the performance: There is more merit in the lines of "Photos" than in the generality of such pieces, and there is in its two acts enough material for two similar entertainments. "Photos" is the most amusing entertainment of its kind. Like the rest of such things the success of "Photos" chiefly depends upon the ability of the performers, and among the performers in "Photos" are some very clever people. Heading the troupe we find Miss Alice Harrison and her brother, Mr. Louis Harrison. Both are well and favorably known here, and both last evening won fresh admiration. Miss Harrison, although suffering from hoarseness, was warmly applauded for her singing, and in her burlesque of emotional business elicited much merriment. Mr. Louis Harrison appears in five characters, varied enough for the display of that gentleman's comic ability. Mr. R. E. Graham, who will be remembered in this city as a member of the Colville troupe, was exceedingly happy in his sketch, more particularly in that of "Brutus." He made up for Lawrence Barrett admirably. The likeness was instantly recognized, and the actor managed to rather cleverly imitate that tragedian's mannerisms. Miss Carrie Daniels has a fine presence, is evidently a novice in acting, and possesses a sweet, sympathetic contralto voice, which she uses with judgment. In her song of "Genevieve" it was shown to much advantage, and from her exquisite expression she was rewarded with a double encore. Mr. W. H. Thompson as Buncher would have been more effective had he been less extravagant; Mr. Harry Warren, Mr. George W. Gaston and Miss Theresa Wood creditably did what was allotted them.

Pope's.

The Stewart Family will inaugurate the season at this house. Their entertainment is styled "Rainbow Revels," and is something between the Troubadours and Vokes. The company comprises Mr. R. Stewart, R. Stewart, Jr., Miss Docy Stewart, Miss Maggie Stewart, Miss Nellie Stewart, and Bertie Collins. The Stewarts hail originally from Australia, where they acquired a high reputation as artists. Subsequently they appeared in London and other places in England, and made a decided success. Recently they made their first appearance on the American stage at Haverly's Theater, New York, and achieved a most gratifying success. The New York Herald said of them: The music they rendered was bright and sparkling, and their acting indicated a thorough familiarity with the stage. All of the members of the talented family found play for their musical tastes, and the audience warmly appreciated the excellent entertainment that was afforded. They are full of theatrical ability, and would, anywhere in America, make a sensation by reason of the excellence of their work. They are rich in dramatic material, and the daughters are nowise behind in embellishing every theme wherein face, figure and voice combine to make an effective result. "Rainbow Revel," is interspersed with music, dances, etc., and includes airs from the latest successful opera, "La Fille du Tambour Major."

Grand Opera-House.

Milton Nobles, the favorite American actor, commences the season here to-morrow (Sunday) evening in his celebrated play of "The Phœnix." Nobles is popular and will secure a warm greeting. His "villain still pursued her" will bring down the house as if it had never been heard before. In addition to the Phœnix during the week Milton Nobles will appear as A Man of the People.

Uhrig's Cave.

On Monday evening at Uhrig's Cave the Corelli-Laurent Opera Troupe is announced to appear in "La Fille de Madame Angot." The cast includes Blanche Corelli as Clairette; Charlotte Hutchings as Mlle. Lange; Henri Laurent as Ange Piton, and Gus Hall as Larauvidiere. The opera has been well rehearsed and will be well put upon the stage. This work has now the refreshing flavor of novelty about it, as it has not been heard here for some time. To-night at Uhrig's "Fatinitza" is announced, and the last performance of Suppe's opera will take place to-morrow, Sunday, evening.

Barnum's.

The last performance of P. T. Barnum's Great and Only Moral Show takes place this evening. Those who have not seen it should avail themselves of the last opportunity.

Local Green-Room Gossip.

Raymond is underscored at Pope's for the 13th inst. in "My Son."

Mr. James Hannerty will this year officiate as assistant treasurer at the Grand Opera-house.

At Schnaider's Garden to-morrow evening the St. Louis Grand Orchestra will give a concert.

It is said Miss Flora Pike will be tendered a complimentary benefit in October previous to her departure for the East.

It is rumored that "The Seacadet" will be produced by the Corelli-Laurent troupe after "La Fille de Madame Angot."

Rice's Surprise Party are booked for the Grand Opera-house September 13 for one week. They will appear in "Revels."

Notes.

John T. Raymond begins his American season September 13, at St. Louis, and his company will include Wm. Cullington, George C. Boniface, Jr., Frank Wise, W. F. Edwards and others.

The engagement of Edwin Booth for the opening of the Princess' Theater, London, in October, is now an accomplished fact. Mr. Booth will play Hamlet, and will be supported by a company comprising Mrs. Hermann Vezin, Messrs. J. Ryder, T. Swinbourne, Charles Harcourt and other well-known London actors.

Miss Ellie Wilton of the Union Square company, Miss Pearl Eytinge, Mrs. E. L. Davenport, Messrs. L. R. Shewell, E. J. Buckley, J. R. Grismer, H. A. Weaver, W. F. Owen, A. D. Billings and George Warren are reported engaged in the company to support Salvini in his American tour under Mr. Stetson's management.

Sig. Rialp, the chorus master of Mapleson's opera company, has returned to New York, and will at once begin rehearsals of the extra chorus for the two operas which will, in all probability, occupy most attention during the coming season at the Academy—Wagner's "Rienzi" and Boito's "Mefistofele." Mme. Gerster will appear on the opening night of the New York season, and on the second night "Mefistofele" will be produced.

A musical and literary entertainment was given by the Young Men's Christian Association at the Pine Street Presbyterian Church last Thursday evening, which was largely attended. The following persons took part in the entertainment: Messrs. A. G. Robyn and C. C. Kilgen, Miss Mary Hogan, Mrs. N. H. Pritchartt, Miss Julia Christian, Mr. J. E. Diekenga and the choir of the Presbyterian Church. The gem of the performance was the recitation of "The Lost Heir" (Hood's) by Miss Mary Hogan, St. Louis' favorite elocutionist, which was rapturously applauded, the lady giving as an encore "Curfew Shall Not Ring To-night," which was also enthusiastically received.

Miss Emma Abbott will begin her season September 6, with a strong company, with James W. Morrissey as her manager for the third season. The principals will include Julia Rosewald, from the Vienna and Dresden Opera-houses, the heroine of "The Merry Wives of Windsor;" Zelda Seguin, who will create the role of Carmen in English; Pauline Maurel, called the American Venus de Medici, will be the page of Gounod's "Romeo and Juliet;" Signor Brignoli will essay Tadeo in "La Zingari," Thaddeus in "The Bohemian Girl," for the first time in English, and Manrico in "Il Trovatore" in English; Wm. Castle is to create Don Jose in "Carmen," and Lithgow James, six feet two inches in his shoes, and said to equal Stanley at his best, will be the baritone, making Mephisto in "Faust" his role d' attaque. Miss Abbott will create the heroine of "Mireille" (The Lover's Pilgrimage), and with Castle will illustrate the lyric and osculatory fervor pertaining to "Paul and Virginia," "Romeo and Juliet" and "The Gem of Peru" (Guarany).

Schierman, Albert Bauer, Peter Pickel and F. J. Schulte.

Struck With a Club.

Ruby was taken to Dr. Hodgen's office, where his wounds were dressed, after which he was sent home to 507 South Fifth street. A long standing enmity was the cause of the row. Marshall was arrested and now is locked up at the Third District Station on a charge of assault to kill.

A COMPLIMENTARY entertainment will be given by St. Ange Lodge, No. 72, Knights and Ladies of Honor, at Koerner's (formerly Staehlin's) Garden this evening. The principal features of the occasion will be the reading of "Buck Fanshaw's Funeral" and the telling of the "Smun and Smoon Story" by Dick Johnson, ex-Consul to China.

PUBLIC BENEFACTORS.—Harvey, Jenner, Guthrie, and other discoverers of great facts in medical science, have been properly called the World's Benefactors. Whoever succeeds in lessening the pain and dangers of the human family deserves no less a title. HUNT'S REMEDY, the great Kidney and Liver Medicine, is a medical marvel. It cures all complaints of the Kidneys, Bladder, Liver and Urinary Organs—even Bright's Disease—and it saves valuable lives by the thousand.

A BALLOON ascent was made at Cherbourg on the occasion of the fete given by the municipality to Grevy. The general direction of the wind being from the land to the sea, a Government steamer was sent out to secure the safety of the aeronauts. After having travelled for more than an hour in the direction of Portsmouth, the aeronauts opened the valves and returned safely to shore. More than 100,000 spectators witnessed the experiment.

A VOLKSFEST.

Celebration To-Morrow by the United Germans.

Grand Procession—Addresses and Amusements in Union Park.

To-morrow the Germans of the city will unite in a grand festival which is expected to prove the largest display of the kind ever seen here, not excepting even the grand pageant of 1872. The prime object of the fete is a patriotic one, and shows that, though thousands of miles away from home, and in the full enjoyment of the privileges of citizenship and the immunities vouchsafed by a free country, the German still look back to Vaterland and revere its customs.

All of the organized societies will participate, and thus bring together in general communion the exiles from home. The low and the high, the educated and the ignorant, the rich and the poor, the business man and the politician, the bondholder and the laborer, the natives of the north, south, east and west of Germany, all will come together to-morrow and enjoy with the relish and abandon peculiar to their race the various games and pastimes they indulged in across the water. While the representatives of each locality will have their distinctive peculiarities there will be a few national affairs in which all will join.

The principal attractions of the day will of course be found in Union Park, where the festival will take place and where all the amusements will be furnished; but the preparatory parade will in itself be something well worth inspection. It will be at least one mile and a half in length, and will be replete with objects suggestive of German characteristics. Scattered along the line will be a profusion of bands of music, and the Germans, passionate lovers of a "concord of sweet sounds," will have none but the best the city can afford. Artistically decorated wagons will be drawn by handsomely caparisoned horses, each of the vehicles bearing some emblematic reminder of scenes, occurrences and people in the old country. The actual facts will not monopolize the representations, but the brilliant creations of her poets and the vast legendary lore of Germany will also furnish their quota. Mediæval occurrences and the daring deeds of chivalrous knights errant will be reproduced, and the procession will on the whole be a partial history.

THE PROCESSION.

The procession will form in Lucas Market square in the following order:

First division on the east side of the square, the right wing resting on Washington avenue; second division on west side of square, right wing resting on Washington avenue; third division on St. Charles street, facing the square, and the fourth on Pine street. All organizations are required to be on the ground by 9 o'clock, when the procession will move.

The route will be from Lucas Market to Washington avenue, thence to Sixteenth street, north to Franklin avenue, east to Fifth street, south to Myrtle, east to Fourth, south to and along Carondelet avenue to Russell avenue, west to Eleventh, thence to Union Park.

There will be several societies in the procession which have not sent in their names, but those participating that are so far known are the following, which are given in the order of march:

ORDER OF PROCESSION.

Mounted Police.

Grand Marshal Chas. G. Stifel, Aids; Gen. Adjutant Arnold Beck; First Adjutant, M. Pins; Second Adjutant, Jacob M. Gruen, Third Adjutant, August Reimner; Fourth Adjutant, John H. Local Boating Notes.

The programme for the St. Louis Athletic Club is not yet fully decided upon.

A race between the two paper shells of the Modoc Club will take place to-morrow morning. All members are requested to be at the boat-house at 9 a. m.

The Mississippi Rowing Club have consented to shorten the course for the championship race and to make the time to suit the other clubs. This is all that can be asked.

The picnic of the St. Louis Rowing Club will take place to-morrow at Bodemann's garden. There will be athletic and aquatic sports of various kinds. Capt. Edell will give an exhibition pull in his new single scull.

The New Orleans Orchestra under the leadership of Mr. Chas. Schuchman, serenaded Mr. J. A. St. John on Wednesday evening. Quite a number of Modocs were on hand to enjoy the balance of the evening, and in fact the early part of Thursday.

Mr. Adolphus Bush, wishing to have the matter settled as to the respective merits of himself and Fritz Becker, whom he defeated in a three-mile race at Coney Island, now offers to row Mr. Becker a race from Bissell's point to the foot of Arsenal Island, race to take place during the month of October. It is said that Tony Faust is ready to row the winner of this race.

The target match for the St. John cup, which took place at Modoc Boat-house last Sunday, was a very interesting affair and closely contested. There were some eighty-five contestants. The cup was won by Mr. Lehman. The second prize, a splendid gold match box, was won by Capt. McDonald, of La Crosse. During the contest the medals which were contested for the day before by the four-oared crews were presented to the winners, Messrs. Assman, Taylor, Simms and Miller. The presentation speech was made by Mr. Franklin Ferriss.

The Beethoven Conservatory.

The early fall session of the Beethoven Conservatory of Music will open upon the 6th of September at the new location, No. 1603 Olive street. This school of music has met with a success in St. Louis that has not been equaled by any institution of the kind in the West. During last season it attained the height of popularity, a fact principally to be attributed to the able and efficient management of the director, A. Waldauer. Mr. Waldauer opens the new term with every preparation for continuing the good work that the conservatory has been doing, and with a faculty which shows that the management of the institution are making every legitimate endeavor to retain the patronage which they have already obtained. The faculty secured are all experienced instructors in their various branches, and some additions have been made which will materially enhance the reputation and the efficiency of the Conservatory. Mr. Waldauer has lived for a long time in St. Louis, and it is almost useless to dilate upon his merits as a musician, an instructor or a director. He has made for himself a reputation here that needs no mention, as his position is thoroughly appreciated by every one at all interested in the subject of music. The Beethoven Conservatory is the latest of a long series of endeavors to build up music in the West, and its success is looked upon by Mr. Waldauer as an indication that his efforts have been understood and appreciated. The well-known Professor A. J. Goodrich has been secured, and will be in charge of the department of musical theory. Prof. Goodrich is perhaps the most remarkable among the musicians who were born and educated in America. He made no attempt at the study of music until 1863, when a strange circumstance influenced his future life. He attended the funeral of a prominent musician, at which several of the best military bands united in playing Beethoven's Funeral March from the Heroic Symphony. The effect of the music and the occasion was so strong that young Goodrich at once informed his father that he wished to be a musician. His wish was gratified and his success was complete. In the year 1866 the muscles of the fourth and fifth fingers of Mr. Goodrich's right hand became so paralyzed from constant practice that he abandoned further attempts at piano virtuosity. He began the study of the voice, composition and the science of instrumentation. With regard to voice culture he became convinced that to control the respiratory organs is the foundation of singing, and that purity of tone is the great desideratum to be secured. His writings upon this subject go to prove he is one of the most careful, intelligent and successful voice cultivators in the country. Mr. Goodrich's principal works are: A Treatise in Three Parts Upon the Art of Breathing; How to Sing; Tone-making, Vocal Style, Pronunciation, Execution, and how a song should be sung according to the words and the music; The Language of Music. This latter work is being published now in Germany, besides many songs, trios, quartets and orchestral arrangements. Mr. Goodrich will preside over the vocal department of the Conservatory during the present season, and will no doubt repeat his previous successes in that specialty.

Mr. Marcus Epstein, a graduate of the Leipzig Conservatory, will retain control of the piano departments, and Mr. Henry G. Hanchett and Mr. A. Epstein, will also remain. The remaining members of the faculty are Prof. J. Amann, in charge of the guitar department; Prof. E. Buechel flute department, and Miss Lily McEwing, primary department. A course of five lectures will be given upon musical topics during the season. Several recitals and concerts will be given during the season, and the whole institution will be managed in a way that will merit the patronage previously given to the Conservatory.

Extortion in the Yosemite.

From the San Francisco Bulletin.

There is now great danger that all the abuses which have rendered Niagara Falls almost hateful to so many tourists will be repeated at Yosemite. The charges are in several particulars too high. A mustang horse to go five or six miles is charged at the rate of $3 for four or five hours. The value of the horse is about $20. The guide also, who lets the horses, charges $3 for his services. The tolls on the trails are $1 for each person on horseback. The stage service is good by all the roads, but the fare is high. The hotel buildings in the valley are poor, and not at all adequate to the importance of such a place. At present the revenues accruing to the State from leases in the valley are small. But Yosemite tourists do actually leave annually more than a million of dollars in the State. Some intelligent system ought to be devised not only to help along necessary improvements in the valley but to make this wonder of the world more accessible to the people. Only a small per cent of Californians have ever seen the Yosemite Valley. Probably more Bostonians have seen it than San Franciscans. The Federal Government premised in making the grant that the State would not only exercise a wise guardianship over this famous reservation, but that State pride would be enlisted to make such improvements in the valley as good taste and good judgment would suggest. It is only just to say that up to this time the State has done very little. The roads in the valley itself cannot be improved by private enterprise. Three good roads now enter Yosemite when a few years ago there were only mere trails. Others may yet be constructed. But the improvements in the valley must be conducted under the auspices of the State.

Pilgrims for Lourdes.

From the Parisian, August 19.

On Tuesday, between 7,000 and 8,000 pilgrims left Paris by the Gare d'Orleans for Lourdes. They were conveyed in seven trains, each composed of twenty carriages. The first train left at four o'clock in the afternoon. At noon groups of women and priests, laden with baskets and bundles, began to arrive at the station. At 3 o'clock the crowd was thick. Along the wall of the courtyard were ranged litters, mattresses and stretchers, on which lay women who seemed to have no life left in them, emaciated children, men and boys, halt, maimed, blind and diseased, a horrible sight. A fine fellow of twenty-five years of age, who had lost the use of his limbs, was waiting patiently in a hand cart. The departure of the trains continued until midnight, all the service being performed by the priests, the Sisters of Mercy, and the commissaire of the pilgrimage, who distributed and verified the special tickets with the device of Notre Dame du Salut at the head. The departure was organized admirably, and the sick folks were placed in the train with the utmost rapidity and skill by the priests and Sisters of Mercy. But what a horrible sight it was! An ambulance train is nothing compared with a train full of sick and bedridden women and scrofulous children. Out of the 7,000 pilgrims nearly 2,000 were sick; the rest were, so to speak, able-bodied pilgrims.

Restoring Sebastopol's Grandeur.

From the London Examiner.

A first step toward the re-establishment of the Russian naval station at Sebastopol has just been accomplished by the removal thither from Nicolaeff of the great floating dock and the machinery of several of the workshops of the dockyard. As soon as the new naval barracks are finished the greater part of the naval brigade at Nicolaeff will follow, and, in the course of a few years, Russia hopes to be as strongly established at Sebastopol as she was previous to the Crimean war. Of course the shattered city can not be reconstructed in a day, and it will take time to remove the traces of the most terrible bombardment the world has perhaps witnessed, but in a country like Russia, where Government labor is cheap and plentiful, and funds can be obtained without the obstructive medium of a meddlesome Parliament, the ultimate restoration of Sebastopol to its original grandeur is not an impossible matter, and the only thing that may delay the task may be the belief that the impending annexation of Constantinople will deprive the Crimean fortress of its raison d'etre. Of course we English patriotically believe the time to be far distant when the two-headed eagle shall flap its wings over the palaces and mosques of Tsargrad, but all nations do not think alike, and Russia imagines the conquest of Constantinople to be nearer than is generally believed in Western Europe.

1880. A MODEL MODERN NEWSPAPER 1880.

THE POST-DISPATCH

Of St. Louis.

DAILY AND WEEKLY EDITIONS

Consolidation of Three Newspapers in One.

The Evening Dispatch,
The Evening Post,
The Evening Star.

LEADING EVENING PAPER of the WEST.

A Democratic Journal Devoted to the Interests of Missouri.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1880:

The POST-DISPATCH has been and will be a Newspaper in the true sense of the word. It owns the exclusive membership and franchise in the Associated Press. In is in constant telegraphic communion with all parts of the habitable Globe. Its Correspondents are at all the principal Fountains of News, and spare neither Money, Labor nor Brains to be the EARLIEST, the most COMPLETE and the most RELIABLE Historians of the Incidents and Accidents of the Day throughout the World. It will maintain its Excellent Record of being the Most Thorough and the Most Accurate Chronicle of the Local Happenings of St. Louis, enjoying, as it does, facilities for gathering information which are not shared by any other journal in the city.

Editorially it will continue to urge good, old-fashioned Democracy as the only Rational System of Government, and in the coming struggle between IMPERIALISM and FREE INSTITUTIONS it will be found at all times in the lead, fighting the Battle of the People beneath the Standard of Law, Liberty and Local Self-Government. Though Democratic, our Democracy is preceded by an allegiance to Truth and Honesty, and, once convinced that truth to itself or honesty to the public demand it, it has proved in the past that it will spare neither censure nor rebuke within or without the party when it deems them necessary. Its principles are tolerably familiar to the people of the State, as they have been repeatedly and frankly stated, and on every question from hard, sound Money to Western Improvements everybody knows that a definite position has been taken and held.

THE WEEKLY POST-DISPATCH.

The WEEKLY POST-DISPATCH has been established to be to Missouri what the Daily is to St. Louis, and the manner in which it has been taken up—evidenced by the surest of all testimony, the subscription list—shows that a progressive, enterprising, live Newspaper can command success in itself, without adventitious aid, and with no recommendation except that of innate and superior merit. The WEEKLY POST-DISPATCH has already become an institution which Missourians cannot afford to do without, for, in the character of its news and the practical value of all its matter, it is almost a necessary household article to every farmer or merchant in the country. The markets are brought down to the very moment of going to press, just a day ahead of any morning contemporary, for, in the nature of things, a paper printed in the morning cannot contain as late news as a paper printed in the evening and going out by the same evening's mail. The importance of this one consideration, were there no other, would be enough to place the WEEKLY POST-DISPATCH far beyond any competitor, for a day's intelligence from a fluctuating market may save or make a business. The Weekly is specially edited to give a complete history of the week brought down to 4 o'clock of the day of [illegible] each subject having its carefully considered space, and its proper application to the business, the domestic, or the social wants of its readers.

The year of our Lord 1880 opens with a promise of solid prosperity, the like of which has not been known since the War. The piping times of Peace in all their fullness and plenty foster industry and enterprise in the land. Every wheel that turns, and every share that rolls the mellow loam up to the ripening sun, is driven by the sturdy arm of a citizen whose vote will be cast in this crisis-year either to make this happy promise a permanent reality of true popular self-government, or to see in its stead a sham Republic, with its attendants of a military, personal, centralized Government, eternal sectional strife and certain Mexicanization.

The POST-DISPATCH will appeal during the coming year to the conscience and patriotism of all true Americans who would keep the sacred and revered fires of Liberty alight to rally to its support during a season which will witness the bitterest and the most important Political Canvass which the American Republic has been yet called upon to enter.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

The POST-DISPATCH will be delivered by carriers to any part of the city or sent by mail, postage prepaid, to subscribers in any part of the Union, on the following terms:

Daily, per week..........................	20 cents.
Daily, per month.........................	85 cents.
Daily, three months......................	$2 50
Daily, six months........................	4 50
Daily, per year..........................	9 00

The carriers will collect the city subscriptions on their routes; all subscriptions by mail must be prepaid, and annual subscriptions will not be considered unless accompanied by the money.

In our Vocabulary "There is no Such Word as Fail."

One of the most important branches of the retail clothing business in all large cities is the department devoted to the BOYS and CHILDREN. In our large establishment we have made this a special feature—catering to the wants of all classes—and keeping in stock the most extensive assortment of any house in the West. You will readily see that in order to accommodate the tastes and wants of the multitude of patrons, great judgment is necessary in the selection of fabrics, style of cut, etc. A man in moderate circumstances can bring his little family along and find neat, well-fitting garments to suit his purse. His more fortunate neighbor of large means and income will find the most elegant garments—cut and trimmed handsomely—of the latest and most fashionable make. The near approach of school suggests a general fitting out of the Boys' wardrobes—the head and feet must also be remembered. In this connection we call your attention to our large stock of school shoes for Misses, Children and Boys. Also to our Boys' and Children's Hat Department, which is filled with the latest novelties in head wear in quality and price to suit everybody. Years of experience and a close study of the wants of the public enable us to satisfy a great many. But it is our earnest desire to improve as time advances until our establishment shall be as perfect in all minor details as it has become with the people.

In The Rogues' Gallery.

The photograph of "Yellow" Sam Johnson, who, in company with "Nosey" O'Neil, was arrested while in the neighborhood of Boland's jewelry store a few days ago, was added to the rogues' gallery by Sergt. Chapman this morning. Sam is reputed as being a bad man and having served two terms in the Penitentiary at Joliet, Ill. O'Neil is familiar to all the detectives of this city, having lived and "worked" here a number of years.

Senatorial Conventions to Be Held To-Night.

The Result of the Legislative Conventions—Notes.

This evening Senatorial Conventions will be held in the Twenty-ninth, Thirty-first and Thirty-third Districts. The Twenty-ninth District is all split up on the street car issues and the nominations will in little probability be made to-night. In the Thirty-first it looks as though James McGrath will be nominated. Friends of Bosley and Edmunds, however, express confidence in the outcome.

In the Thirty-third District indications point to the nomination of Capt. Dan. Able. He has the Eighth, Twentieth and Twenty-eighth Wards pledged, and only has to make one vote to secure an election, with the Sixteenth, Eighteenth and Twenty-third Wards to draw from. W. B. Thompson and M. H. Phelan are however still in the ring, and were "shying" around quite lively this morning.

The Legislative Ticket.

The legislative conventions were held last evening and nominations made without difficulty in all but the First District, which convention adjourned until the 28th instant to meet at Anthony & Kuhn's Hall. The issue in South St. Louis is the repeal of the street railroad law of 1860, in order that the South St. Louis railroad, built by Messrs. Chouteau, Terry, Mott et al., be allowed to operate its line. The postponement of the nomination is claimed as a victory for the repealers.

The Second District held a harmonious convention at Democratic headquarters and unanimously selected Jas. J. Stanton, of the First Ward; P. Wm. Prevenchere, of the Third Ward; Frank A. C. McManus, of the Tenth Ward, and Chas. P. Johnson, of the Seventeenth.

The Third District nominated John F. Walton, of the Second Ward; John J. McGarry, of the Fourth: James Carroll, of the Twelfth, and Hugh J. Brady, of the Fourteenth.

The Fourth District nominated Richard M. Wray, of the Sixth Ward; J. Frank Merriman, of the Eighteenth, and Patrick Mulcahy, of the Twentieth Ward.

WHO THEY ARE.

Jas. J. Stanton has for several years been an active member of the Board of Education.

Mr. Provenchere is a talented young lawyer and has for two years past represented the Third Ward in the Central Committee.

Frank McManus, of the Tenth Ward, is one of the best men on the ticket. He is a fine speaker and a young gentleman of culture. He is engaged as deputy constable and clerk in Justice Taaffe's court.

Chas. P. Johnson is too well-known to the people to need introduction to the public in this connection.

John F. Walton is one of the most honored citizens of the Second Ward, and has had extended experience in public life, more recently as a Justice of the Peace.

John J. McGarry was a member of the last Legislature, and acquitted himself creditably.

James Carroll is a Deputy Sheriff, and is known as an energetic, intelligent and practical young man.

Hugh J. Brady was a member of the last Legislature, and looks upon his re-election as a "vindication."

J. F. Merriman is a young lawyer of great promise.

Pat. Mulcahy is a well-known contractor and builder.

Richard M. Wray is an experienced clerk in the Wabash Railway office.

Col. W. W. Polk Accepts.

ST. LOUIS, September 4, 1880.

Messrs. J. B. LEGG, JOHN S. MELLON, JACOB PICKEL, R. A. CAMPBELL and others:

GENTLEMEN—In reply to your very flattering call in last Saturday's issue of the POST-DISPATCH I will beg leave to suggest to you that it is the duty of the Democrats of the Second Congressional District to select the strongest man in the district to run for Congress. I would also suggest that the leading Democrats should raise all the money necessary to run the primaries and select the best men of each ward and township and let them run as unpledged delegates, and in the convention let them tender the nomination to that man who in their combined judgment will best represent all the interests of this district. I feel fully assured that if such a course is pursued we will be able to carry the district by at least 4,000 majority, it matters not who the Republicans may nominate. Should such a delegation meet in convention and tender me the nomination I would accept, feeling that the highest honor of the district had been conferred upon one who had done nothing to merit it except to live honestly and always vote for and support the Democratic ticket. While I am not a seeker for office I will fully appreciate any and all efforts that may be made by my Democratic friends. Hoping that an acceptable nomination may be made, I am, gentlemen, with many thanks, your most obedient servant, W. W. POLK.

Col. Normile on the Situation.

Col. J. C. Normile was met yesterday evening by a POST-DISPATCH reporter and questioned about the rumor that he intended to run as an independent for the office of Circuit Attorney. "I have made up my mind," said Col. Normile, "to retire from politics altogether. I will never come before the people again."

"You had a strong following?"

"Yes, I had. And it is a following which I could take into an independent race for the position. I have been assured that if I consented to run independently the Republicans would make no nomination and hundreds of Democracts of the strictest school have assured me that if I would come out they would support me. I have no doubt that were I to come out I could be elected triumphantly."

"Do you mean to run?"

"No, I do not. I don't propose to have anything to do with politics at all."

"Of course your pledge binds you anyhow."

"That pledge is binding, I presume, though Col. Murphy wrote it and signed it for me."

"How much did the campaign cost you, Colonel?"

"About two hundred dollars altogether—merely for necessary expenses."

Notes.

John G. Manning was renominated as Constable in the Fourth Ward yesterday.

The Republican State Convention will be held at Mercantile Library Hall on September 15.

Pat Kane, deputy sheriff, will be nominated as one of the candidates in the Fifth District on Monday.

The First District Republican Congressional Convention will be held at the Union Park Hall on September 16.

James G. Spaulding will be renominated for Constable in the district composed of the Tenth and Eighteenth Wards.

John W. Drake refused renomination in the Second Ward for Constable, and his former deputy, John F. Ryan, will receive the nomination.

The Second District Republican Congressional Committee will meet on Monday evening at Turner Hall to call a convention to nominate a candidate.

The Republican City Central Committee will meet at Turner's Hall this evening to fix the date for a convention to nominate city officers, and also settle the question of representation in the convention.

GOLD AS A CURE FOR DIPSOMANIA.

Drunkenness is a Disease, Can be Successfully Treated as Such, and Here is the Remedy.

In whatever way the appetite for spirituous liquors may be formed—whether by entailment of that curse which follows the children of the inebriate to the third and fourth generations, or by habits of personal indulgence—it matters not; the appetite once formed remains.

You cannot legislate it out of existence, and moral suasion avails little where the very power of will is broken. Neither does it remove the difficulty to charge the man, his parents or society with the folly or wickedness of creating the appetite. In either case the appetite is there to curse its possessor, rendering him helpless to govern himself, binding him in his weakness and carrying him whither he would not; till the unwilling victim, conscious of his own impotency, cries out—"O wretched man that I am! Who shall deliver me from this body of death?"

The deliverance can not come by law restrictions—the appetite yields not to Love's restraints—the love of drink grown stronger than love of life defeats them both. Coaxing and cursing are alike out of place; the man diseased in blood and brain requires medical treatment and a cure. This problem of cure has sorely exercised the philanthropy of the past twenty-five years, experience demonstrating that all prohibitory or persuasive measures in the case of the confirmed inebriate are only temporary in their effects and sure of no permanent results. Remedies have so often been proposed, only to fail in the hour of trial, that the wail has been wrung from agonized thoussands—Is there no balm in Gilead? No physician who understands my case? We think there is. And if six months of uniform success in the treatment of the most thoroughly besotted proves anything, it proves that Dr. L. E. Keeley, of Dwight, Ill., has not spent his labor in vain in seeking for a positive remedy, a certain cure for this taint in blood and brain, this craving of a diseased system for alcoholic stimulant. The most confirmed cases of drunkenness, where no sober breath had been drawn for months, have been so successfully treated that in nine days all appetite for drink was gone, never to return.

This remedy, called "Double Chloride of Gold," the secret of which is with the Doctor, we do not care to analyze. The effects are all our concern, and these are easy of verification by all who desire to make examination into the merits of the greatest blessing ever offered the victim of liquor appetite.

I have established a general agency for the sale of Dr. L. E. Keeley's remedies in St. Louis, where a large supply of the Double Chloride of Gold Cure for Drunkenness will be kept on hand and can be purchased of me.

It requires two bottles of the remedy, Nos. 1 and 2, to effect a permament cure, and the price is $9.00 for the pair. During the past six weeks, I have treated at their own homes, in St. Louis and Missouri, and permanently cured more than fifty of our well-known and reputable citizens, and I am now treating and will cure several hundred of the same kind in Missouri, Arkansas and Texas. This remedy is simply infallible and will cure every case on the face of the earth if used as we direct on second page of pamphlet.

I have opened a home for the care, treatment and guaranteed cure of all patients who prefer to place themselves under my charge, where I am now treating and will cure many well known men. Write for particulars and book, Treatise on Gold Cure, which will be sent free of charge.

WORLD-MUSIC.

Jubilant the music through the fields a ringing—
Carol, warble, whistle, pipe—endless ways of singing;
Oriole, bobolink, melody of thrushes,
Rustling trees, hum of bees, sudden little hushes,
Broken suddenly again—
Carol, whistle, rustle, humming,
In reiterate refrain,
Thither, hither, going, coming;
While the streamlets' softer voices mingle murmurously together;
Gurgle, whisper, lapses, plashes—praise of love and summer weather.

Hark! A music finer on the air is blowing—
Throbs of infinite content, sounds of things a-growing,
Secret sounds, flit of birds under the leafy cover,
Odors shy floating by, clouds blown swiftly over.
Kisses of the crimson roses,
Crossings of the lily-lances,
Stirrings when a bud uncloses,
Tripping sun and shadow dances.
Murmur of aerial tides, stealthy zephyrs gliding,
And a thousand nameless things sweeter for their hiding.

Ah! There is a music floweth on forever,
In and out, yet all beyond our tracing or endeavor,
Far yet clear, strange yet near, sweet with a profounder sweetness,
Mystical, rhythmical, weaving all into completeness;
For its wide, harmonious measures
Not one earthly note let fall;
Sorrows, raptures, pains and pleasures,
All in it, and it in all.
Of earth's music, the ennobler, of its discord, the refiner,
Pipe of Pan was once its naming, now it hath a name diviner.

MISS GAY.

From Tinsley's Magazine.

One of the quietest places in the London suburbs is Manville square, Clapham. It lies at the core of a network of shady lanes and sequestered roads; where the thrush and blackbird sing in the quiet evening. The place is gathered into a peaceful calm; and to find yourself in Manville Square, after the dust and turmoil of the city, is as great a change as for the citizen of a sleepy cathedral town to find himself on a prairie, with the feeling of inexhaustible relief always arising from the absence of walls. But in Manville Square you find no solitude. Lightly-swung broughams and fandaus and victorias brush over the smooth roadway now and then; you can on no fine day put your head out of a front window without hearing the laughter of rosy-cheeked children and the patter of tiny feet. Here the sunlight seemed always to come early and stay late. Summer loved the place and lingered longer here than even at Kew. The square had no pretensions to splendor or wealth, or fashion or distinction. The houses were modern, well-built, wholesome and roomy. The grass and shrubs in the inclosure were kept neatly and efficiently, but there was no such prudery in the gardening as prevented cricket to four-year-old boys or the laughing scamper of children through the trees. The genii of the place were peace and prosperous plenty and courteous services. No angry words ever invaded that Tempe of London. No dun ever cast a shadow on its clean flagway or wholesome grass.

The houses all belonged to one landlord, who was a rich man and owned property in several other parts of London. He had made one rule over all his house property, and that was to take ten per cent a year less for his houses than he could easily get, and to be much more particular as to the people he accepted as tenants than most landlords. It was not enough to satisfy him that the tenant was solvent and respectable; he would also be convinced that the applicant for a house of his was free from anything which could make him a disagreeable neighbor. Those who took houses were to be clearly informed that one of the advantages of the place was that there were to be no lodgers in Manville square.

When Dr. Stephen Brooks took his house he read the clause with satisfaction. When a man paid a hundred and thirty-six pounds a year for a house in the suburbs he expected not to have lodgers next door. Mrs. Brooks was delighted at the stringency of this proviso. They had had a hard fight in the world. They were childless. Neither was now young, and a little respectability becomes very acceptable in the middle life of a woman, when youth and matronhood have been spent in narrow ways.

For ten years Dr. Brooks and his wife lived a quiet, easy life in the square; and then when he was sixty and she fifty-five, he died. He had saved a little money—not much. When all debts and expenses had been paid there was no more than fifteen hundred pounds for the widow. Her friends recommended her to give up this house at once, sell off what furniture she would not absolutely need, and take a small house out farther. She wrote to the landlord, and he replied, saying he would be most happy to do anything he could for her. He recommended her to do nothing definite for a day or two until he had called. Between the dispatch of that letter and the visit to Mrs. Brooks the landlord was observed to call at every house in the square. When he saw the widow he was extremely polite and considerate. He hoped she would not consider it impertinent on his part if he alluded to her affairs. He could not help hearing people speak of her, for she and her husband had been the most popular people in the square. Among things he had heard the cause of her wishing to give up the house was, that her circumstances had naturally been reduced by her husband's death. He had ventured to come with a suggestion, which, if she did not feel disposed to adopt, she would, he felt sure, take as well meant. All the people in the square were most anxious she should not leave it, and would do everything in their power to help her. He, too, should be loth to lose an old and valued resident. Now, what he came prepared to do was to cancel the subletting clause of her lease.

Thus it arose in the year 1879, in one house in Manville square lodgings could be secured, and that Edwin Colthurst lived as a lodger with Mrs. Brooks. He occupied a room at the top of the house, looking into the square. He went into the city every day immediately after breakfast, and was not home till near 6 in the evening. He was quiet and unassuming, spoke in a soft, low voice, and never was so pleased as when he could steal in and out unperceived. He had no companions or friends. He lived altogether to himself. No one ever called upon him. He always came home straight from his business and went to his room. At 9 o'clock he came down and ate his supper, mostly in silence. Mrs. Brooks had a great liking for the young man, and often said she wished he would have some of his friends with him on Sunday. But he always made the same answer—"Thank you, Mrs. Brooks. It is very good of you to think of it. But there is no one I care to ask just now."

He had a taste for entomology and reading, and he spent all his Sundays and his evenings over his books or his cases of specimens. Toward the end of May Mrs. Brooks thought he was looking very ill, and attributed this to his want of variety in life, and, she feared, his great carelessness about meals. Often at supper it had slipped from him that he had eaten nothing since breakfast that morning. Mrs. Brooks made up her mind she would see he ate his supper at all events; so toward the end of May she was always in the dining-room when that meal was served for him.

Early in June, while he was in the dining-room, Mrs. Brooks pulled a letter out of her pocket and said: "Mr. Colthurst, I got a letter from a lady this morning. She has been recommended to come here by a lady who stopped here—by a lady who was with me for a few months last year. I want to answer the letter at once, and I cannot read part of her letter or the signature. Will you be so kind as to try if you can make it out?"

"Certainly. Let me see it."

He took it, and after looking at it awhile, read out:

"Dear Madam:—My friend, Mrs. Shipstone, tells me I should be lucky if you would allow me to come and stay with you for a fortnight or three weeks—business takes me to London. My niece accompanies me. We shall need two bed-rooms, opening into one another, and a private sitting-room. We come up to see a doctor. You need not be alarmed. The complaint is neither infectious nor dangerous. An early reply will oblige,

"Yours faithfully, HELEN GAY."

Five nights after that Miss Gay—she proved to be a spinster—arrived with her niece.

"You remember," said Mrs. Brooks that night to Colthurst, as he ate his supper, "the letter I showed you a few days ago from a lady recommended to me by Mrs. Shipstone?"

"Yes, the writing was not very legible."

That is it. Well, they came this morning. I don't wonder at her coming up to town for advice. I don't think she has many weeks' life in her. She's bent on one side, as thin as charity, and quite yellow and pinched. I don't think she came a day too soon, poor old lady. She isn't very old—nothing like as old as I—but death is on her face—death is on her face."

"I am very sorry for the poor lady," said Colthurst seriously. He had a sympathetic nature and a serious manner.

"But her niece, Mr. Colthurst, her niece! I don't think I ever saw any one more lovely. She is fair and slight and tall and graceful, the picture of health, and no more than eighteen. A most perfect lady. A lady in her carriage, her speech, her smile. They are, I believe, of very good family; but young Miss Gay would do credit to the best house in London. She is soft-mannered and cheerful. I cannot tell you how much I was struck with her. She is the loveliest creature I ever saw in all my life, and so amiable. To see her keep smiling all the time to cheer her poor ailing aunt would win any one's love, man or woman, old or young. I have seen her only twice, and then for no more than a few minutes at a time, but never any one else grew on me in so short a space."

Next evening as Colthurst was coming home he met an elderly lady and a tall, slight girl walking slowly toward Mrs. Brooks's. He made up his mind at once that these were the new lodgers, drew back, and saw them enter the house. This was complete confirmation. He did not go into the house then, but walked around the house three or four times. It was such a pleasant thing to think he could go up to that door at any moment, open it with his latch-key, and walk in.

When he awoke next morning the birds in the square were singing, the sun shone out valiantly, all looked gay and young. As far as the square was concerned, old earth looked only in its teens. The clean, handsome housemaid was standing at the area-gate, taking, on behalf of the cook, the bread from the strong, wholesome-looking baker. No children were abroad yet, but a nursery window opposite was open, and he could hear the words of the children as they dressed, and subsequently said their prayers in loud, unfearing voices.

That morning he met no one before leaving the house but the servant who gave him his breakfast. All day he felt uneasy, discontented. He wished it had been a holiday. He would have liked to stay home and look at his specimens. When you come to think of it, business was such a poor thing after all. Answering correspondence and seeing men and undertaking to do this, that or the other thing was such a colorless, dull way of spending a fine day like this, when one might read in the inclosure, and look out through the railings at anyone who might happen to pass.

He was in a great hurry home that evening, he knew not why. He usually came by 'bus, read his paper on the top and thought that drive through the fresh evening one of the most delightful events of the day. This evening he fancied the omnibus crawled, and that it was most undesirable one's business place should be so far from one's place of residence.

At last he reached the square. And now he was in no hurry to enter the house. He walked all around the flagway and then went into the enclosure. He walked up and down the path in front of Mrs. Brooks'. It was close upon 8 o'clock when he unlocked the gate, crossed the roadway, ascended the steps and thrust his latch-key into the hole. He pushed open the door, and as he did so he saw coming down the aunt and niece. They were dressed for walking. He drew aside, bowed and raised his hat.

"Thank you," said the elderly lady, as she passed him.

The tall, lithe form of the girl bent slightly forward, and a smile of gracious recognition came upon her sweet young face.

He had never seen anything so lovely in all his life before. He would have given the world to turn round and walk out in the beautiful soft evening with her. He had often before been attracted by beauty, but never as now. A spirit such as he had never seen in woman before hung about this girl. There was with her a most excellent gentleman. There came with her a subtle presence, a promise of serene repose. You got from her no hint of change, of growth, of development, of progress. It seemed as though she had reached the Elysian Fields, the goal of hope, the sphere of immutability.

"What a sweet girl Miss Gay is!" said Mrs. Brooks that night while she ate her supper. "She doesn't seem to know she is good-looking or that she is so amiable. I know I never saw such eyes. If her aunt only kept her in London and brought her out, she would be the beauty of the season—photographed, and her carte in every window."

"I should be very sorry to see her anything of the kind. She is too good to be a 'beauty.' Put a delicate angel like her up among a lot of brazen married women, whose good looks ought to be at home and not stuck everywhere all over town for vulgar fools to leer at."

"Well, I am not in favor of those photographs myself; but I think the girl ought to be brought out. I wonder what will become of the dear girl when the aunt dies?"

"I imagine nothing could be better for her, if anything happened to her aunt, than to come and live with you here."

"I should like that. We could take care of her here, Mr. Colthurst. Have you heard her play? Queer, out of the way, dreamy things that make you feel first as if you wanted to go to sleep and then as if you wouldn't close your eyes on any account."

"I should like above all things to hear her."

"I'll ask if I may bring you up to-morrow evening. The aunt is a nice, sensible lady, and isn't a bit too hard on the child."

All that night one phrase of Mrs. Brooks haunted him "We could take care of her." We—we—we? Take care of her? Take care of that sweet young girl? Ay, though all the world sought to do her harm it should not succeed while he could raise an arm to strike a blow for her.

To-morrow evening he might meet her. He might hear her voice coming to him. He might watch her as she sat and talked. Her hand might touch his. Her dress might brush against him. He might sit and listen to her playing in the twilight. He might pick up a flower, or a ribbon, or a glove she had worn.

If, when her aunt died, she only came to that house, what care they would take of this gentle-faced girl! She would be like Mrs. Brooks' daughter—live with her, dine and sup at the same table, and sit with Mrs. Brooks' in the afternoons and evenings. That would be delightful.

When he got back to Manville square next evening he did not linger out of doors, but walked with a quick step up to the house, and went in. It was close to 8 o'clock when he met Mrs. Brooks. She had good news for him. He was to go up that evening and be introduced; but Miss Gay had said he must remember they were in the doctor's hands, and he must not take it ill if they retired early.

Mrs. Brooks devoted herself altogether to the aunt, and the young people were left almost altogether to themselves. They talked of a great number of things. He found her intelligent, shy, candid and anxious for surprise.

"You have never been in London before?" he asked. "No, never. I am greatly delighted with it."

"Would you like to live here always?"

"I should like it very much. But aunt could not manage to live here. In fact, we are going back very soon."

"How soon?"

"In a few days. I do not know how many. When we are done with the doctors."

"I am very sorry for the cause of your visit to London. I wish it had nothing to do with doctors."

She smiled and said gently, "Ah, so do I."

"What do they say?"

"Aunt does not tell me all. She is afraid of alarming me. I fancy this case is a very bad one."

"Is it of long standing?"

"No. Only a few months."

"I understand you have no other relative in the world but Miss Gay?"

"Not one."

"Suppose the doctor's report is unfavorable, what will you do?"

"Go back to the country with aunt."

"And what will you do then?"

"Wait."

As she said this word she cast her eyes down, and he could see her eyelids were heavy with tears. How he wished and prayed she might come to London when all was over. He could not bear the notion of her going away now. He made up his mind that as soon as her aunt died she should come to London and live with Mrs. Brooks. "We could take care of the poor child," he said in his heart. Aloud he said, "Could you not manage to stay in London?"

"Ah, no. The doctors say London will not do. We must get away to the sea. Torquay or Bournemouth, I am not sure which."

"Mrs. Brooks has been giving me a most enthusiastic account of your playing. Are you very fond of music?"

"Yes, very. I care for nothing in the world so much."

"And who are your favorite composers?"

"Mendelssohn and Schubert."

"Do you play much?"

"Not nearly so much as I used."

"Why have you given up playing so much?"

"Ah," she sighed and shook her head, "I dare say because I am getting old and lazy."

"May I hope you will play a little to-night?"

"I will play with great pleasure, only not too long."

She played for half an hour, and Colthurst listened enchanted. He knew nothing of music himself, but he loved it dearly. He had never before heard anything so weird, so soft, so tender, so spirituelle. It was like the sighing of forlorn winds in mystic groves. He could not play the simplest air, but he could interpret the most intricate, or, at all events, all airs had meanings for him; right or wrong, he did not pause, he did not care to inquire.

At the end of half an hour the aunt came and said: "That is enough for to-night, child."

Colthurst rose to go, and in taking leave, said: "You have given me only an appetite for your music. May I, Miss Gay," turning to the elder lady, "come another night?"

"Certainly. We shall be very glad to see you if you will not mind our being rude, and turning you out early. We live by rule, you know, and we must take no liberties."

He went out for a stroll round the square, it being then only 10 o'clock. As he walked round and round the square he could think of nothing but the lovely stranger. Every movement of hers had been grace, every word melody. Light seemed to gather round her as she sat. One after the other he recapitulated all she had said or done, with the intention of finding if anything had been out of harmony, if there had been any savor of bad taste. Time after time he had finished the list with the reflection, "No, it was as perfect as the most fastidious could dream of—all had been interpenetrated with the essence of grace and spirituality."

Then, from rehearsing the things which had taken place, he rehearsed them merely for the delight of keeping her image before his eyes, her voice about his ears.

Four delicious evenings passed away in the same manner, and then came bad news; they were leaving to-morrow for Torquay. She told him, with a smile, the doctors had said no time should be lost. They were to go, and at once, the east wind now blowing being most injurious. He was greatly grieved they were going so soon. When were they likely to be back again in London?

"We do not know. We can not say. Perhaps never."

"You must not say that. Surely you will come back again."

"That will depend in a great measure on how we get on at Torquay."

"But you—you will surely come back to see us once again? I am sure Mrs. Brooks would do anything she could for you. She is the most kind-hearted woman in the world."

For an instant the habitual faint smile left the face of the girl and her eyes half filled with tears. Her lips trembled, and she said in a low, unsteady voice: "I am sure she would be kind to me. Every one is so kind to me. I am sorry I have to go away."

"But you will come back, won't you?" he pleaded.

She looked up suddenly, with the brightest smile he had ever seen on her face, saying: "Perhaps I may: I'll try. Now good-by."

Life went back to its old course at Manville square. Some other people came and occupied the rooms where she had been. Day after day Edwin Colthurst watched the summer ripen and the green deepen in the foliage of the square. Day by day he dreamed of her return and of delicious evenings spent within her presence. As he drove in and out of town, he conjured with her image until all the recesses of his memory were filled up with pictures of her. He would have given anything he possessed to write to her, to get a single line from her; but although the period of their acquaintance had been long enough for him to fall in love, it had not been long enough to warrant him in asking to be allowed to write. The summer waned and autumn was at hand. Still no word came from the guests of June. The rich green of the foliage was here and there touched by the first foreboding finger of decay.

Morning found a hoar-frost on the ground, and evening brought a chilly dew. Old people avoided the inclosure after sundown, and the delicate chose the sunny side of the square. The buxom housemaid had married the baker's man, and stood no longer at the head of the area steps with arms akimbo. The birds were getting ready for winter and saving up their songs to keep the cold out.

It was in the November of last year, when the first fine sifting of snow fell out of the sullen sky, that a letter came to Mrs. Brooks. It had a black border, was not in the same handwriting as the former one, and ran as follows:

DEAR MRS. BROOKS: As you will gather from the edge of this sheet, the worst has come. I hoped against hope for days and months. It is a heavy trial, but God's will be done. I hope to be with you on Thursday next, when I can tell you all.

Yours sincerely, HELEN GAY.

Mrs. Brooks looked at the mortuary card and put the card and the letter back into the black-bordered envelope, saying to herself, "They were both Helens. Poor thing; we must be good to her. Poor thing!"

When Colthurst came home she told him the news. He read the letter slowly, then said: "We must do all we can for her. Yes, poor soul."

He took up the mortuary card, read it, stared at it, stared at Mrs. Brooks, dropped it, staggered to his feet and cried: "Good God! It is the girl who is dead!"

"No, no!"

"Yes; aged eighteen."

Simple Language in Sermons.

From Chambers' Journal.

In addressing the multitude, simplicity of language is always highly desirable, there being the danger of the unlearned attaching very diffierent (and sometimes very awkward) meanings to the grand and uncommon words which even careful clergymen may be betrayed into using in the pulpit. One of those when in his study and in the act of composing a sermon, made use of the term "ostentatious man." Throwing down his pen, he wished to satisfy himself, ere he proceeded, as to whether a great portion of his congregation might comprehend the meaning of the said term, and adopted the following method of proof. Ringing the bell, his footman appeared, and was thus addressed by his master: "What do you conceive to be implied by an ostentatious man?" "An ostentatious man, Sir?" said Thomas. "Why, sir, I should say a perfect gentleman." "Very good," said the Vicar. "Send Ellis (his coachman) here." "Ellis," asked the Vicar, "what do you imagine an ostentatious man, to be?" "An ostentatious man, sir?" replied Ellis. "Why, I should say an ostentatious man meant what we calls—saving your presence—a—jolly good fellow." It need scarcely be told that the Vicar substuted a less "ostentatious" word.

THE FARMER'S WORLD.

Hints to the Sovereigns Who Till the Soil.

Sheep Husbandry—Profits of Tree Culture—Cider Mills—Keeping Winter Apples—Suggestions to Housewives and Valuable Receipts.

COUPLED SHEEP.

A reader asks what time is the most desirable to couple sheep. He wants to have the lambs come as early as will be safe for them.

The period for gestation for ewes is from 150 to 154 days, or, in round numbers, five months. If it is desirable to obtain early lambs for exhibition in the fall at the fairs, they should come in January or February; but it is indispensable to have suitable accommodations where these ewes may be kept separate from the rest of the flock, and in comfortable quarters, so that the young things will not be pinched by cold weather. To secure lambs thus early the sheep must be coupled in August or September. But if it is desirable to raise early lambs for market, where this branch of the business enters into the calculations of the farmer, and as the best prices are obtained early in the year, it is important to have the lambs come as early as they can be well looked after. There is much risk in this branch of the business and we repeat that those who engage in it should not fail to provide comfortable quarters so that losses from inclement weather may be light. It often happens that losses from lack of proper shelter and care in this branch of the business overbalance the profits, or in other words, that such losses leave no profit in having lambs come early. The greatest gain from sheep husbandry is in saving as much as possible of labor and loss in the management of the flock, and much disappointment and discouragement will follow every lambing of ewes if comfortable quarters and good care are wanting.

In the latitude of the lake region lambs are quite safe that come about the middle of April. Some farmers prefer that the increase should not begin until the first of May. At that period the weather is mild, and if the young things are attended to at once and housed in case of cold rains, they will soon gain strength sufficient to carry them safely through the spring-time. To attain this result, the best plan to adopt is to separate the buck from the sheep from August until the coupling time; and he will be in a better condition for service if he is judiciously fed with a grain ration every day. Most of our experienced flockmen give their bucks a small allowance of corn or oats daily six or eight weeks before the season begins, increasing the quantity slightly every few days until the feed is pretty liberal; and the feeding is kept up until the season is over. In the meantime the buck should have plenty of exercise to prevent any bad effects that might otherwise follow from this stimulating food.

While the best course is to separate the buck from the flock, it is sometimes inconvenient to do so. In that event he should be fettered by tying a fore and a hind foot together in such a manner as to interfere with his freedom of action. The apron sometimes used is unsatisfactory, as it does not prevent chasing and worrying of the ewes. There is no method as satisfactory as separating the bucks from the flock.

At coupling time the buck may be turned with the flock, or allowed to go with it a few hours at a time each day for three or four weeks, and then he should be removed.

THE PROFIT OF TREE CULTURE.

In many cases trees are the most profitable crop that can be planted. Upon almost every farm there are barren hills, worn fields, marshy spots or otherwise unproductive lands which, planted in grass or grain, make scanty returns for the labor expended upon them. Sometimes such fields are abandoned to sterility; sometimes an occasional crop of meager proportions is grown upon them; always they are an eyesore in the landscape and a plague and tax to the farmer. Yet in nearly every case such fields might be made to bear a tree crop which would make them as profitable as the best lands around them. A few bushels of nuts and a few days' work are all that are required. The sun and rains of fifteen or twenty years will do the rest, and at the end of that time the once barren field will yield a timber crop well worth the waiting for, while the accumulated leaf mould on the surface, in most cases, will have cured the land's barrenness.

A shrewd young farmer in Northern New York has learned this lesson by observation. Twelve years ago the timber was cut from a stony hilltop on his land, and now there is a second growth of trees, the market value of which he finds to be at least that of twelve cereal crops from good land, although the growth has been spontaneous and unregulated.

TO KEEP UNOCCUPIED ROOMS DRY.

It occurs with many people that they have to leave their houses for a time, either in summer or winter, during which period, especially in damp seasons, not only the furniture, but also the walls and the paper on them, are liable to get damaged by the moisture in the atmosphere. This can be avoided in a simple manner. Before leaving the house the rooms containing furniture ought to be well fastened up, to exclude as much of the outer air as possible; a dish with dry chloride of lime should then be placed in the middle of the apartment, and inside another larger vessel, intended to receive the water flowing out of the former. The well-dried chloride of lime has such an affinity for water that it will attract all the moisture contained in the room and keep the air perfectly dry, so that no harm can occur to either furniture, books, paper, &c. Care must only be taken to open doors and windows when the apartments are to be occupied, as this dried air is not good for breathing.

MAKING VINEGAR.

The apple crop is abundant, and the thrifty farmer and housewife are casting about to know what they will do with the apples. It is too early to make apple-butter, or cider for winter use. We can, however, now make a good article of vinegar. If the sound apples are pressed now and the juice put into clean barrels and placed in the sun, with a bottle neck downward in the bung, to let in the heat and keep out the gnats and flies, a good article of vinegar may be made before cold weather. The process may not be completed by that time, but it can be so far advanced that when freezing weather makes it necessary to put the barrels in the cellar, the cider may be racked off and put into the cellar to complete the second fermentation.

Don't fail to rack it off after the first fermentation, if you would have clear and pure vinegar, free from any unpleasant taste. Now is the time to make a good pure article of vinegar at a little cost. It often happens that vinegar can be made sooner by adding one-third or one-half rain water, with a small quantity of molasses, but while this hastens the process of fermentation, it does not improve the quality of the vinegar. It will lack body and richness. It may be sour enough to sell for pure cider vinegar, and may be a far better article than the majority of the stuff sold for cider vinegar.

The family that abhors the commercial compounds of acids called vinegar may now make themselves independent of them.

REPELLING FLIES.

A farmer writes: I manage to keep flies out of my stable by removing the droppings several times a day, and sprinkling very slightly the floor of the stable with kerosene. I have a tin can with a cork in it, through which is pierced a small hole; through this I drop the kerosene. A pint will last over a week, and seems to be quite objectionable to flies of all kinds.

KEEPING WINTER APPLES.

Will winter apples in large quantities keep better if put directly into a cool, dry cellar at the time of gathering, early in October, than if put into a fruit-room above ground and transferred to the cellar later? As cellars are nearly always warmer in autumn than cool buildings above ground, apples usually keep much better if stored in the latter till freezing weather. The best place in autumn is an out-house facing the north, shut warm days and open cool nights. They keep best in barrels if these are opened before any decay commences, the barrels excluding air currents and preserving a uniform temperature. Much, however, depends on conditions and circumstances, and the owner must use his judgment and experience.

THE GREGG RASPBERRY.

N. Obmer, of Dayton, O., who has largely cultivated the Gregg raspberry for several years, informs the practical farmer that he thinks it will supersede all the black-cap varieties for market. He has about thirteen acres of this sort, about six in full bearing. His entire crop was sold to one firm, paying about two dollars and a half per bushel, or half a dollar more per bushel than for the Mammoth Cluster. Although that is a great berry region and prices rule low, he realized from his six acres in full bearing and four acres with a partial crop, about $2,000. From his full bearing plantation the product was not less than 100 bushels per acre.

CABBAGE LICE.

Cabbage lice may be destroyed with strong soapsuds, made of common whale oil soap, or with a strong decoction of tobacco, continuously applied. But a better way is to boil four ounces of quassia chips in a gallon of water for ten minutes, and add four ounces of soft soap. Brush this over the leaves.

THE VIEWS OF AN OLD FARMER.

A successful old farmer once said that "one acre of land, well prepared and cultivated, will produce more than two which received only the same amount of labor used on one."

"One cow, horse, mule, sheep or hog, well fed and cared for, is more profitable than two fed on the amount that will keep one well."

"One acre of grass is worth more than two of cotton where no grass is raised."

"No farmer who buys corn, pork, fodder, hay and oats as a rule for ten years, can keep the sheriff away from his door in the end."

"The farmer who never reads the papers, and sneers at book-farming and improvements generally has a leaky roof, poor stock, broken down fences, and complains of bad seasons and poor lands."

"The farmer who is above his business, and intrusts it to others to manage, in due season has no business to attend to."

MILK FEVER.

Milk fever is a disease of the blood consequent upon a disordered circulation, and is a sort of apoplexy, the brain being inflamed and congested, and the nervous system prostrated. Usually, a cow afflicted with this disease lies still, with the head on the flank, but sometimes dashes the head about violently. Mild cases alone are amenable to treatment, which would be to give a strong purgative—sixteen to twenty ounces of epsom salts, with half an ounce of carbonate of ammonia, light feeding, and rest in a dark, clean, cool, quiet stable.

SMALL CIDER-MILLS.

In early times, in this country, almost all the cider—and much cider was then used—was made in large mills, owned by individuals or firms, who operated them in the same manner that grist-mills were managed. Every farmer brought his apples to the mill, had them ground and pressed, and received the cider that was produced. He paid so much per barrel for having his cider made. If he did not want to pay cash, the "miller" took his toil in cider or apples. The mills were of large capacity, so that a thousand bushels of apples could be worked up in a day. As a rule, a farmer could take his apples to a mill six or eight miles from his place, have them ground and pressed, and return home with his cider at night. There was no greater loss of time than in taking a lot of corn or wheat to a grist-mill.

During the past few years a large number of small mills for grinding apples and presses for squeezing the juice from them have been sold. Farmers who made not more than ten barrels of cider per year bought them. These small mills are costly, liable to get out of order, not easy to manage by persons unacquainted with their use, and certain to be ruined in a few years if they are not kept under cover. Old cider-makers declare that these small mills and presses are expensive to run, even if they are obtained for nothing. They state that only about three-fourths of the juice contained in the apples can be obtained by their use, and that what is obtained is of very inferior quality. The juice which is obtained by slight pressure is almost entirely water, while that which is rich remains in the pulp unless very heavy pressure is employed.

It would seem to be very poor economy to invest in a mill and press if one has but a small amount of apples to work up. The interest on the money they cost would pay for taking the apples to a mill and having the cider manufactured. One large cider mill is sufficient to work up all the apples raised in a town, and it could do the work more economically than it could be done in a large number of small concerns. If several farmers can not unite in erecting a suitable mill to be operated on the co-operative plan it would be better to pledge their patronage to some person who would erect and equip a good building. Experience and skill are required for making cider, and these are not likely to be acquired by persons who make but a few barrels of cider each year by the use of a poor apparatus.

Facts for the Farmer.

It is estimated by some receivers that fully 3,000,000 bushels of flax seed have been raised this year.

Michigan had 1,835,191 acres under wheat this year, against 1,601,710 acres last year. The crop was an average one, and the yield is estimatet at from 30,000,000 to 35,000,000 bushels.

Muck is cooling to the soil in summer, and warming in the winter; it collects moisture and retains it; it acerates the earth, is a reservoir of ammonia and other elements of plant-food, not the least of which are its crumbling shells and fragments of petrifications.

The crop of wheat in Montana Territory turns out to be very good, notwithstanding that the prospect for a while, early in July, was rather unfavorable. The outcome was splendid and there is a demand for all that was raised. Flour at White Sulphur Springs retails at $4 per sack.

Fourteen years ago J. M. Sterling, of Monroe, Mich., placed two gate posts of white oak in front of his residence. When they were set, he bored into the top of each with an inch and a half auger, a hole three inches deep, filled it with common salt, tightly plugged it, and capped the posts. A recent examination of the posts proved that they were as sound from top to bottom as when they were placed in position.

Agriculture is called both a science and an art. The former teaches why it is necessary to plow, and the latter teaches the process of plowing. The art of agriculture has reference to the planting, cultivating and taking care of crops; the science of agriculture teaches us of what they are composed and how crops and plants are built up from the forces of the soil and the atmosphere. The effect of the art is to wear out the soil by constant cropping. The aid of science is employed to restore exhausted fields and to give a knowledge of the means to use to accomplish it.

A Zulu Scare.

From Montague's African Campaigns.

At that moment came a volley far dow the hill where a picket had been posted, i rattle clear and distinct in the night air. staff officer gallops past, and in an instant th rear face is lit up with fire, taken up all alon the line of wagons. Crash go the volley everywhere, belching out flame and smoke till the front is one thick white cloud, pierce only by the sharp and vivid flashes from th muzzles. "Whish!" comes a bullet overhead. "Whir!" follows another after. Cras goes a volley close by, and the fa in our front is once more framed wi fire. Then the big guns in the corner give out an answer, booming their bass notes high above the rest. The bullets are flying merril overhead, and the soldiers, young lads half o them, with a wholesome dread of the Zulu in their poor little hearts, and funk plainly written on their faces, crowd under the wagons for safety, quickly to be pulled out agai by their officers in every style of undres many with their red nightcaps still on. Ou come the skulkers in droves, only to vanis again around the next wagon. The fu grows furious. Bullets sing and whiz pa in flights. The smoke is stifling and hides everything. Half dozen horses, maddened by the din, are rushing about. I the narrow pathway left roun the wagons it is impossible to move freely, so crowded up is it with oxen and horses. Native soldiers squat in masses in the middle, and continually let off their guns in the air, keeping the butts firmly on the ground. Conductors blaze away into the nearest wagon-tilt, tents lie flat, their ropes still tied to the pegs, sure traps for the unwary. Chaos is everywhere, even in the wagons, where the men lie firing incessantly, and paying but scant attention to the orders shouted at them. Twenty minutes of this work and a bugle sounds the "cease fire," and the flashes die out and leave the laager dark and silent as the night itself. Then our General followed and gave his censure pretty freely on the wretched scare, and shame sat on many a face at its recollection. Not a Zulu had been seen, the picket who commenced the row firing at what he thought was some "blacks," but might have been a cloud.

No Cure No Pay.

Dr. Pierce's Family Medicines are guaranteed to cure; for particulars see wrappers and pamphlets. They are reliable, have not sprung into popularity in a week or month and gone out of favor as rapidly, but, being sustained by merit, have won a world-wide reputation, necessitating a branch in London, to supply foreign countries, while the home sales are enormous throughout the United States. Golden Medical Discovery purifies and enriches the blood, preventing fevers, and curing all skin and scrofulous affections, stimulating the liver to action, relieving biliousness, and curing consumption, which is scrofula of the lungs. If the bowels are costive take Pierce's Pellets (little pills). Both sold by druggists.

CHICAGO, ILL., May 5, 1879.

WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION:

GENTLEMEN—For years I have been a great sufferer. My trouble first started with terrible ague chills and constipations. This left me in 1878 with a racking cough and frequent bleedings from the lungs. Since this time I have been continually doctoring, consulting physicians without number. From them I received no benefit or encouragement. The most noted physicians of our city who last visited me expressed their opinions in the brief but hopeless words, "Take good care of yourself the few days you have to live; we cannot help you." I grew steadily worse under their treatment. One day, through reading your Memorandum Book I learned of the Golden Medical Discovery. With but little hope of relief, I purchased a bottle and took it. To my surprise and satisfaction it did me more good than all the drugs I had taken the year around. I am now steadily using it with benefit and recommend it to all to be just what it is advertised.

Sincerely yours, JAMES P. MCGRATH,
50 Wight Street.

Something About Cross-Ties.

From the Railway Gazette.

It yearly takes 20,000 acres of forest to supply cross-ties for the railroads of the United States. It takes 15,000,000 ties to supply the demand, for which, on an average, the contractor gets thirty-five cents apiece, making in the aggregate $5,250,000. In building a new road, the contractors figure on 1,700 ties to the mile, while it takes 300 ties to the mile to keep a constructed road in repair. The average of a good piece of timber land is 200 ties to the acre and twelve ties to the tree. White or burr oak is considered the best timber for the purpose, although cherry, maple, ash and even locust have been used. The business gives employment to an army of choppers, who are paid ten cents for each tie. A continued practice makes the choppers expert in the use of the axe, and a single man has been known to get out thirty-five ties in a day, yet the average is only ten, while an expert will probably get out twenty.
